SELLDUCTION

SELLDUCTION

The Relationship VS Relationsh!t Encyclopedia

Thirty people who will not buy from you.
And will not love you either. They are the same thirty.

SELLDUCTION · MARIUS BOGDAN PÎSLARIU · INTERNATIONAL AMAZON BESTSELLER AUTHOR

EXTRACT FROM THE INTERNATIONAL AMAZON BESTSELLER

The Selected One

Brian Tracy, Medhat Zaki and Marius Bogdan Pîslariu with the International Amazon Bestseller award.

How to become the person clients choose, trust, and recommend.

By Brian Tracy, Medhat Zaki and Marius Bogdan Pîslariu

> "Marius Bogdan's approach to sales represents a fundamental shift I've observed throughout my career: the most successful professionals don't chase deals, they cultivate relationships. His framework proves that ethical behavior isn't a limitation in competitive markets; it's the ultimate competitive advantage. Marius demonstrates that presence, systems, and character create sustainable success far more effectively than tactics ever could. Essential reading for anyone building a career on trust rather than transactions."
>
> Brian Tracy

> "Marius understands what most sales professionals miss: your reputation compounds faster than your commission. His systematic approach to ethical sales proves you can scale integrity without sacrificing results. Having built businesses across multiple markets, I recognize the brutal honesty in his work: short-term wins mean nothing if you can't sleep at night or show your face in the market tomorrow. This book provides the framework for building sales careers that last decades, not quarters."
>
> Medhat Zaki

Find it on Amazon

You do not have a closing problem. You have a discernment problem.

The book counts them twice. Once in the chapter on dating, once in the chapter on selling. Not as a clever analogy, but because the mechanics are identical.

Attraction, pre-qualification, the first meeting, desire, the close, the follow-up. Same stages, different set. Which means the person draining your pipeline and the person draining your evenings are very often the same character in a different coat.

This encyclopedia is not a list of difficult people. It is a mirror. The question is never how many exist. It is how long you tolerate one, and what that says about who you have become.

Pre-qualification is not judgement. It is discernment. Judgement closes the door on a person. Discernment closes the door on a pattern, and keeps your attention for those who can use it.

CONTENTS

The thirty

IN DATING · 01 TO 09

01 The Messianic Narcissist
02 The Seductive Pirate
03 The Chronic Victim
04 The Couch-Potato Depressive
05 The Opinionated Critic
06 The Passive Dreamer
07 The Shy Passive
08 Peter Pan
09 The Emotionally Unavailable

IN SALES · 10 TO 30

10 The Schemer
11 The Notorious Liar
12 The Tireless Manipulator
13 The Great Pretender
14 The Vocational Ghoster
15 The Unqualified Coach
16 The “Everything on WhatsApp” Client
17 The Ping-pong Client
18 The Weary Adventurer
19 The Eternal Referrer
20 The Perpetual Questioner
21 The “I Have a Friend Who” Guy
22 The Emotional Time-Eater
23 The Forever Tester
24 The Paralysed Analyst
25 The Empathetic Martyr
26 The Emotional Blackmailer
27 The Weekend Investor
28 The Influencer with Zero Content
29 The Ego Maniac
30 The Imaginary Saviour

THE AUDIT · PART ONE

Tick every one you currently have in your calendar, your pipeline, or your phone.

Be honest. Nobody sees this page.

- [ ] 1. The Messianic Narcissist
  He thinks he is the Messiah. And that you should feel lucky.
- [ ] 2. The Seductive Pirate
  Flawless on the first meeting. Fog on the second.
- [ ] 3. The Chronic Victim
  Complains constantly. Never looks for solutions.
- [ ] 4. The Couch-Potato Depressive
  Netflix and traumas on repeat. Your empathy is the fuel.
- [ ] 5. The Opinionated Critic
  Never criticises. Just tells you what he would do if he were you.
- [ ] 6. The Passive Dreamer
  Grand plans. Zero action. For five years running.
- [ ] 7. The Shy Passive
  Wants it. Never says it. Then blames you for not guessing.
- [ ] 8. Peter Pan
  He is not looking for a partner. He is looking for a caretaker.
- [ ] 9. The Emotionally Unavailable
  Close enough to touch. Never close enough to reach.
- [ ] 10. The Schemer
  Promises you the moon. Materialises nothing.
- [ ] 11. The Notorious Liar
  King of nowhere. And nowhere is empty.
- [ ] 12. The Tireless Manipulator
  That "something" that ruins your vibe from the start.
- [ ] 13. The Great Pretender
  Behind the 500.000 car sits an account with 500.
- [ ] 14. The Vocational Ghoster
  He was there. He said yes. He felt the vibe. He vanished.
- [ ] 15. The Unqualified Coach
  Buys nothing. But knows exactly how you should sell.

THE AUDIT · PART TWO

- [ ] 16. The "Everything on WhatsApp" Client
  In PDF. But also voice. But short. But detailed.
- [ ] 17. The Ping-pong Client
  Doesn't get in your way. Just takes months off your life.
- [ ] 18. The Weary Adventurer
  The danger isn't that he won't buy. It's the emotional refund.
- [ ] 19. The Eternal Referrer
  Does nothing himself. But always has "someone interested".
- [ ] 20. The Perpetual Questioner
  Reads 42 reviews before ordering a coffee.
- [ ] 21. The "I Have a Friend Who" Guy
  He never did anything. But he has a friend who did.
- [ ] 22. The Emotional Time-Eater
  Zero conversions. Countless conversations.
- [ ] 23. The Forever Tester
  Tries everything. Finishes nothing.
- [ ] 24. The Paralysed Analyst
  17 PDFs, 3 estimates and 2 projections before he breathes.
- [ ] 25. The Empathetic Martyr
  "I don't deserve it." Then asks you for everything, free.
- [ ] 26. The Emotional Blackmailer
  Never asks. Just makes saying no expensive.
- [ ] 27. The Weekend Investor
  Buys businesses on Saturday. Changes his mind on Sunday.
- [ ] 28. The Influencer with Zero Content
  All he owns is a phone and an illusion of scale.
- [ ] 29. The Ego Maniac
  Doesn't listen. Waits for the gap so he can say "I".
- [ ] 30. The Imaginary Saviour
  Believes that without him you are lost.

What your number actually means

The count is not the finding. The pattern is.

0 to 3

Healthy discernment, or a pipeline too small to have been tested yet. Check which.

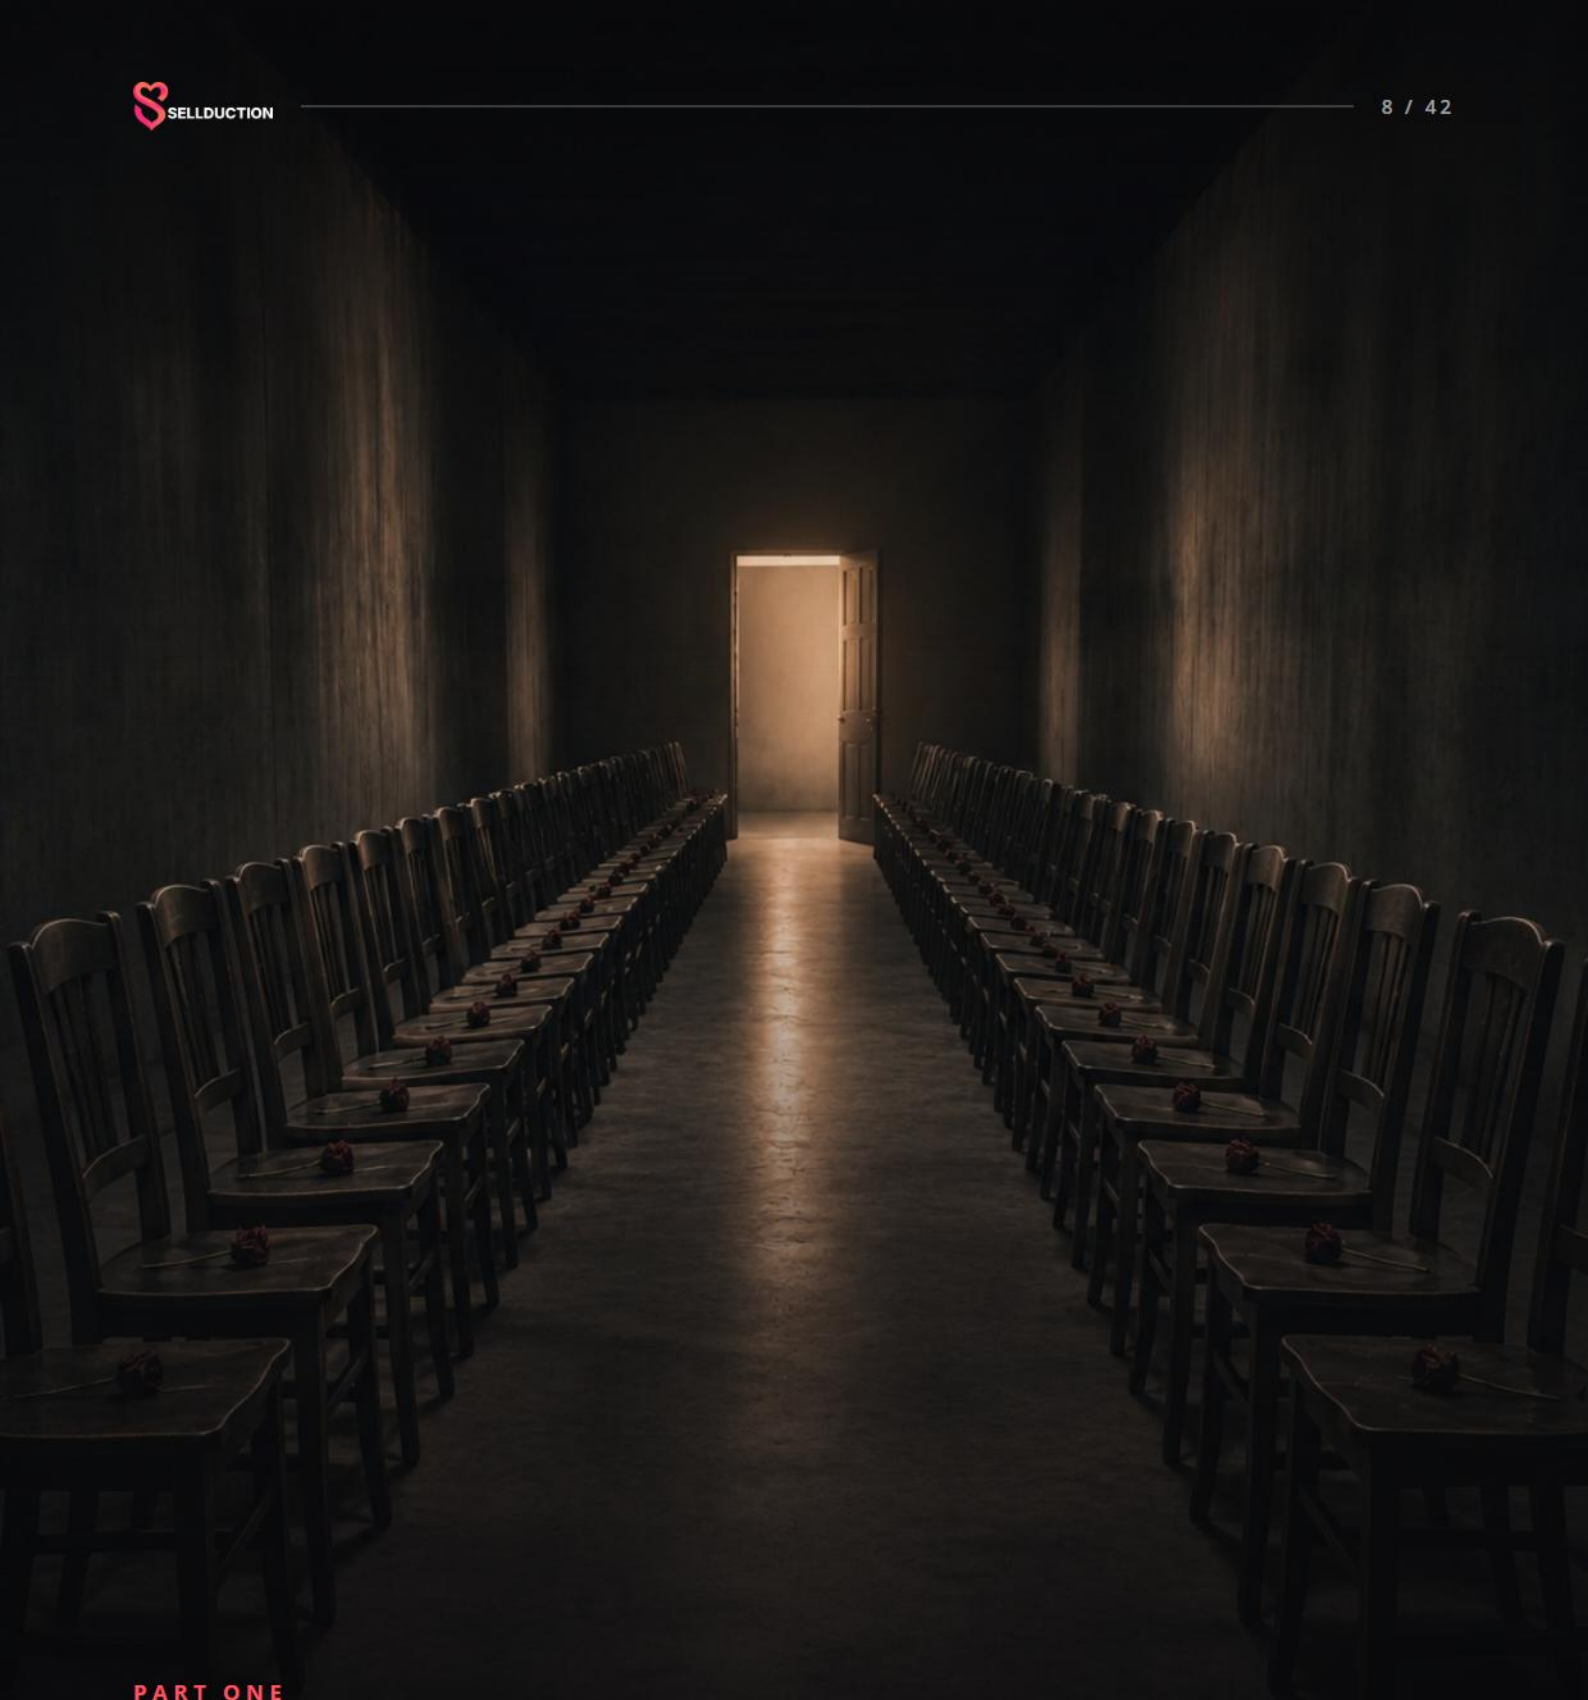

4 to 8

Normal, and expensive. You are carrying roughly one wasted quarter.

9 or more

This is not bad luck. This is a filter that is not switched on.

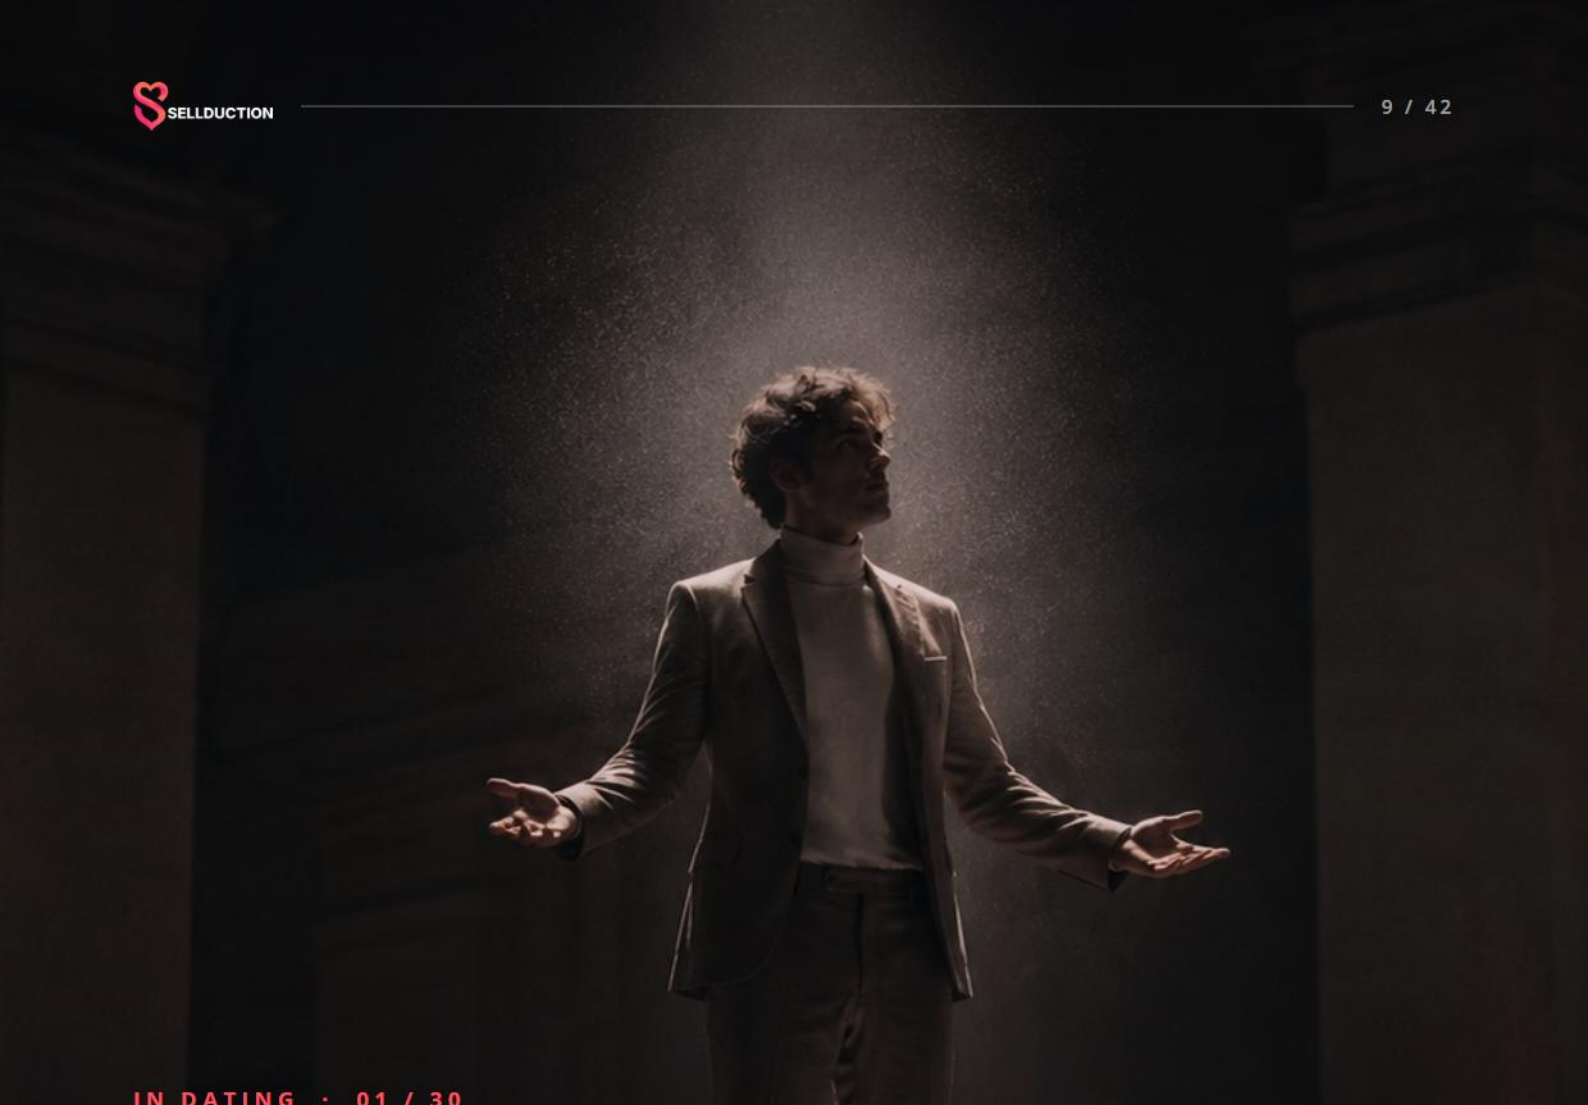

Now the question that matters more than the number: which ones repeat? If the same two patterns keep appearing, they are not finding you by accident. Something in how you present, qualify, or need is selecting for them.

PART ONE

The nine from dating

Chapter 5.1 of the book. Patterns you recognise from your personal life, appearing unchanged in your work calendar.

IN DATING · 01 / 30

The Messianic Narcissist

He thinks he is the Messiah. And that you should feel lucky.

- He explained what he does three times. He never once asked what you do.
- You went home feeling you had sat an interview. And not got the job.
- His friends are not friends. They are an audience.

WHAT IT COSTS YOU

You leave every interaction feeling you have something to prove. That is not a negotiation, it is an audition you entered yourself.

> You will not convince him. He already holds the ultimate truth.

IN DATING · 02 / 30

The Seductive Pirate

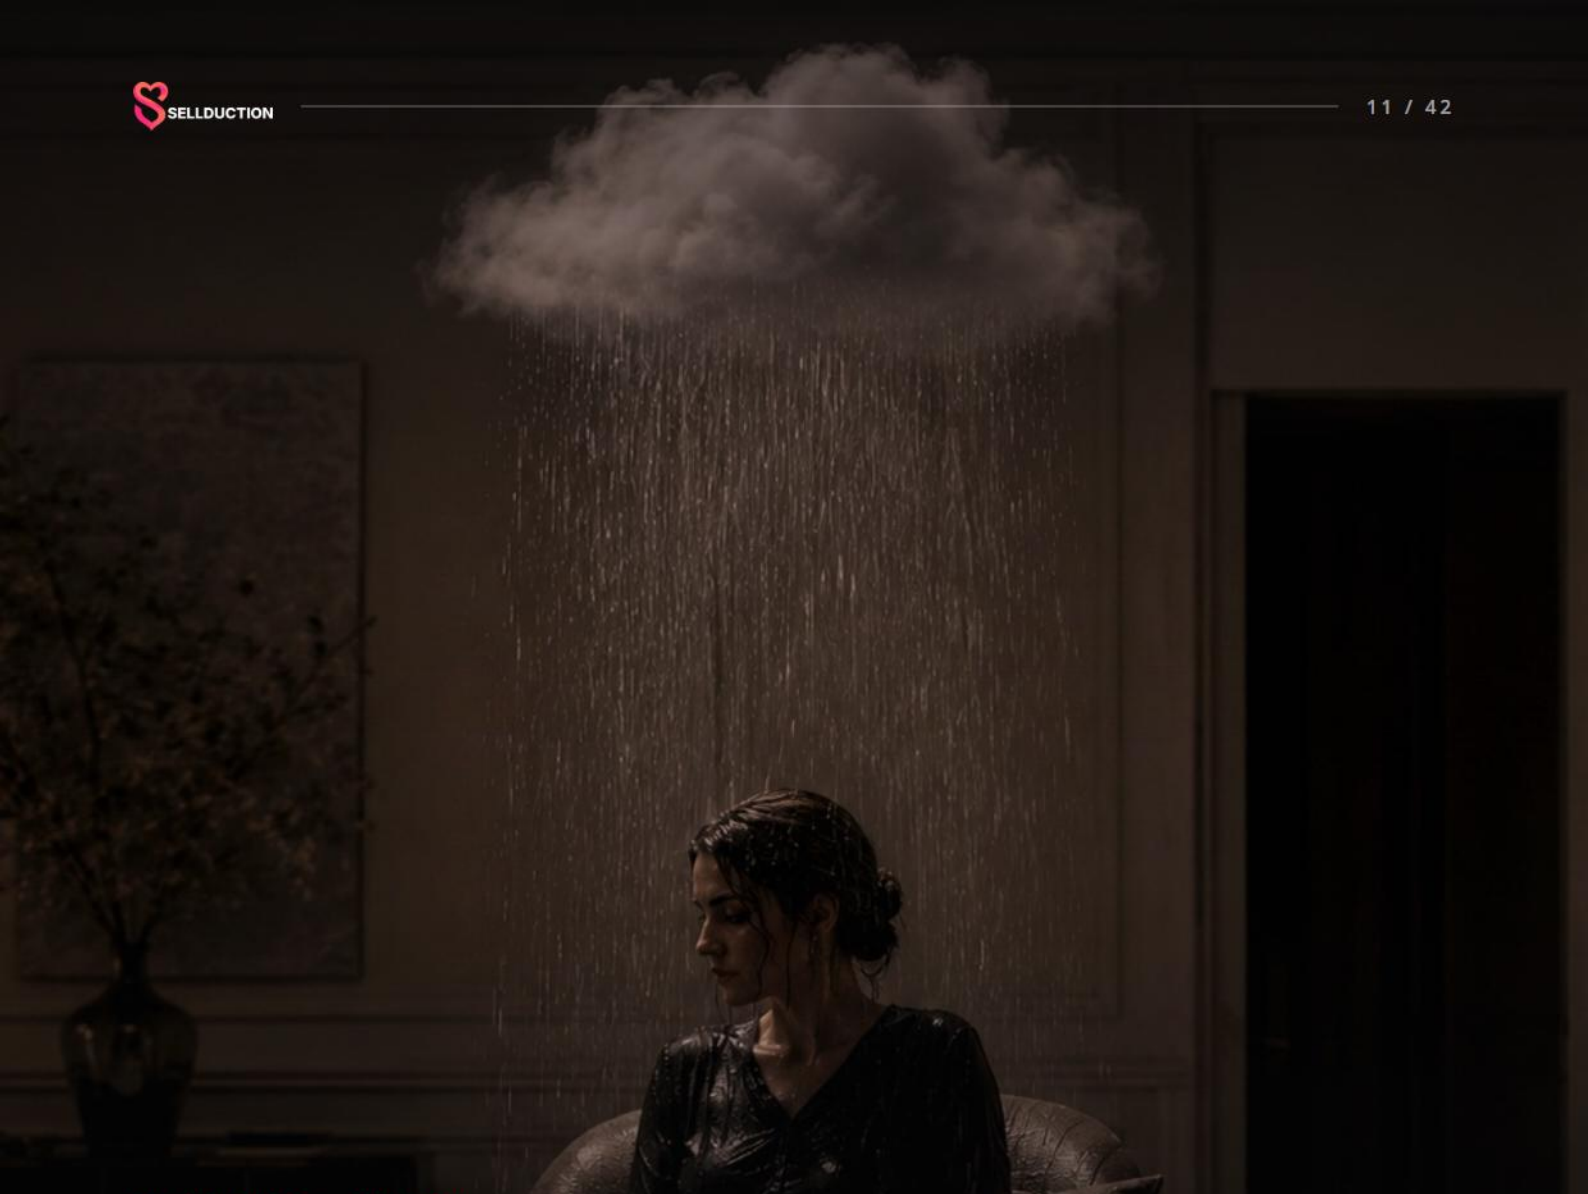

Flawless on the first meeting. Fog on the second.

- Day three: “I have never felt this before.” Day nine: nothing.
- He knows exactly what you want to hear, because he has said it before. Often.
- Intensity is not chemistry. Sometimes it is just speed.

WHAT IT COSTS YOU

He took your work, not your money. And you handed it over gladly, because nobody had listened that well before.

> Too beautiful, too intense, too fast. Your red-flag radar should be screaming.

IN DATING · 03 / 30

The Chronic Victim

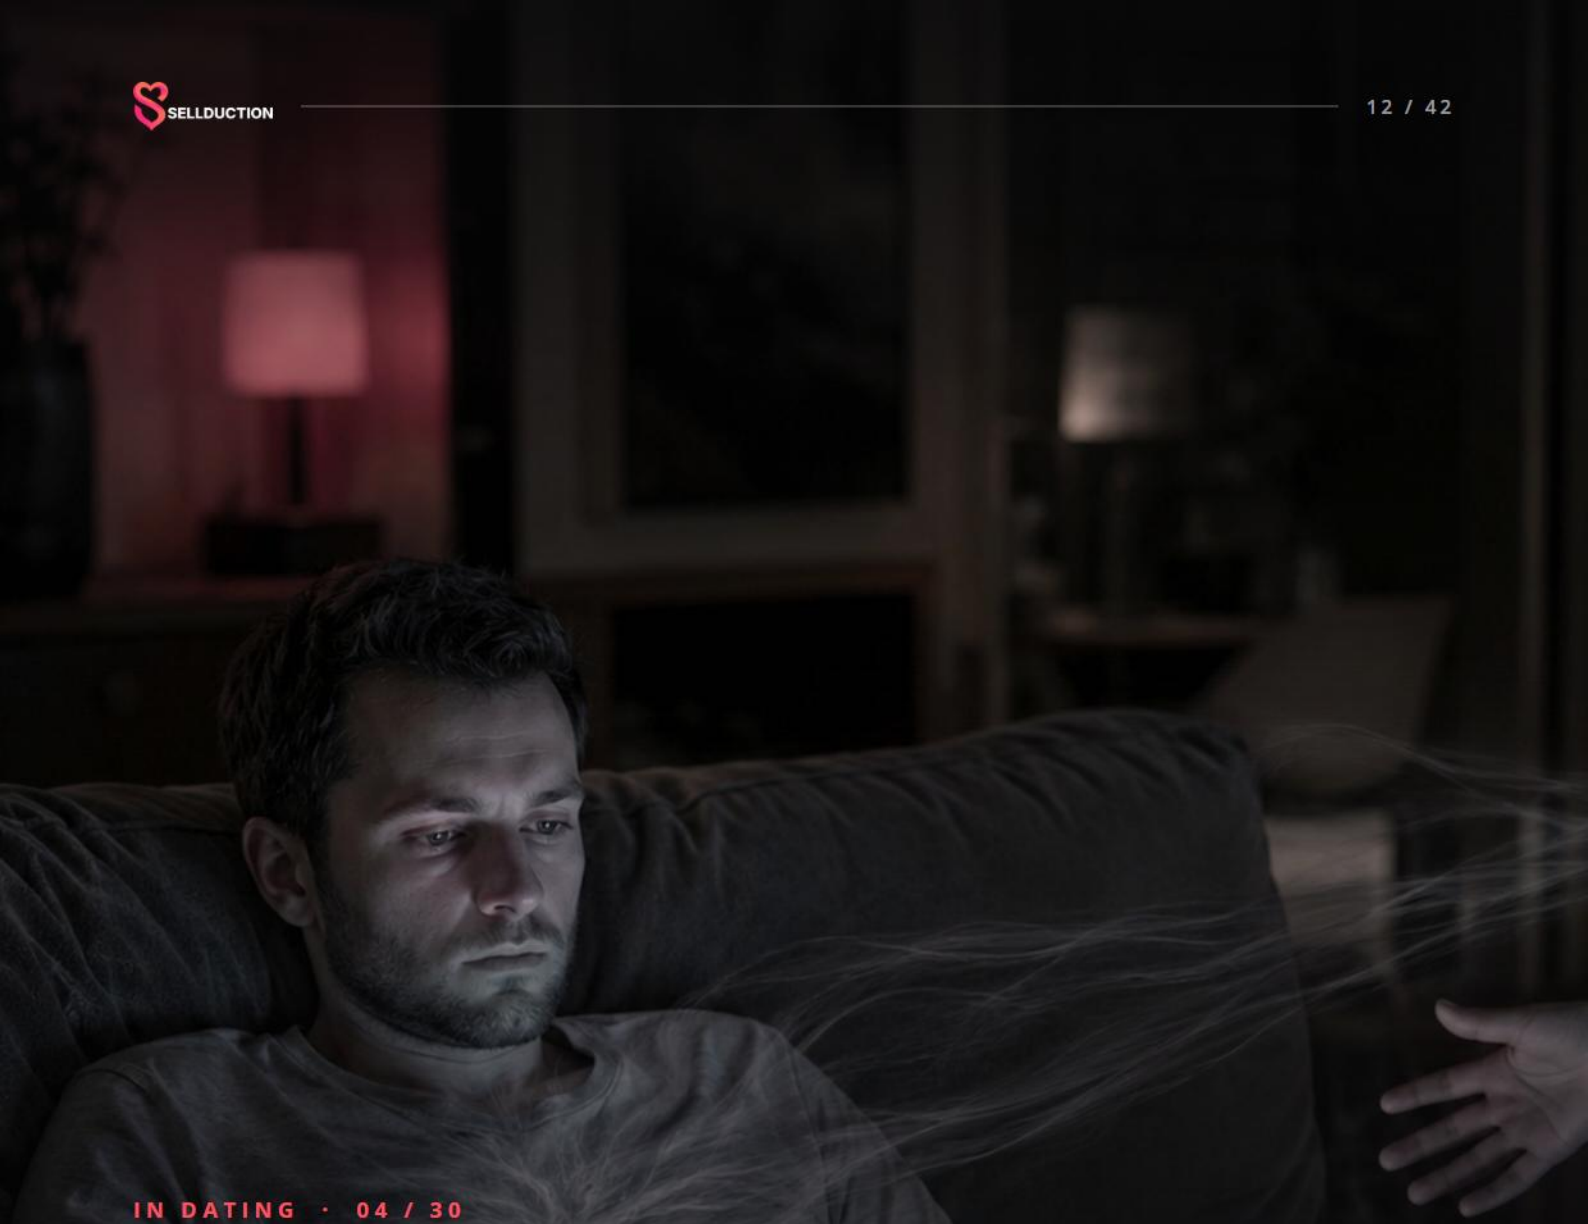

Complains constantly. Never looks for solutions.

- Every solution you offer already has a reason it will not work.
- All of her exes were insane. All of them. Statistically, that is an achievement.
- She does not want out of the story. She wants to tell it better.

WHAT IT COSTS YOU

Drains your energy for zero result, and early on it feels like being someone's saviour. That is precisely the hook.

> Not looking for solutions. Looking for witnesses.

IN DATING · 04 / 30

The Couch-Potato Depressive

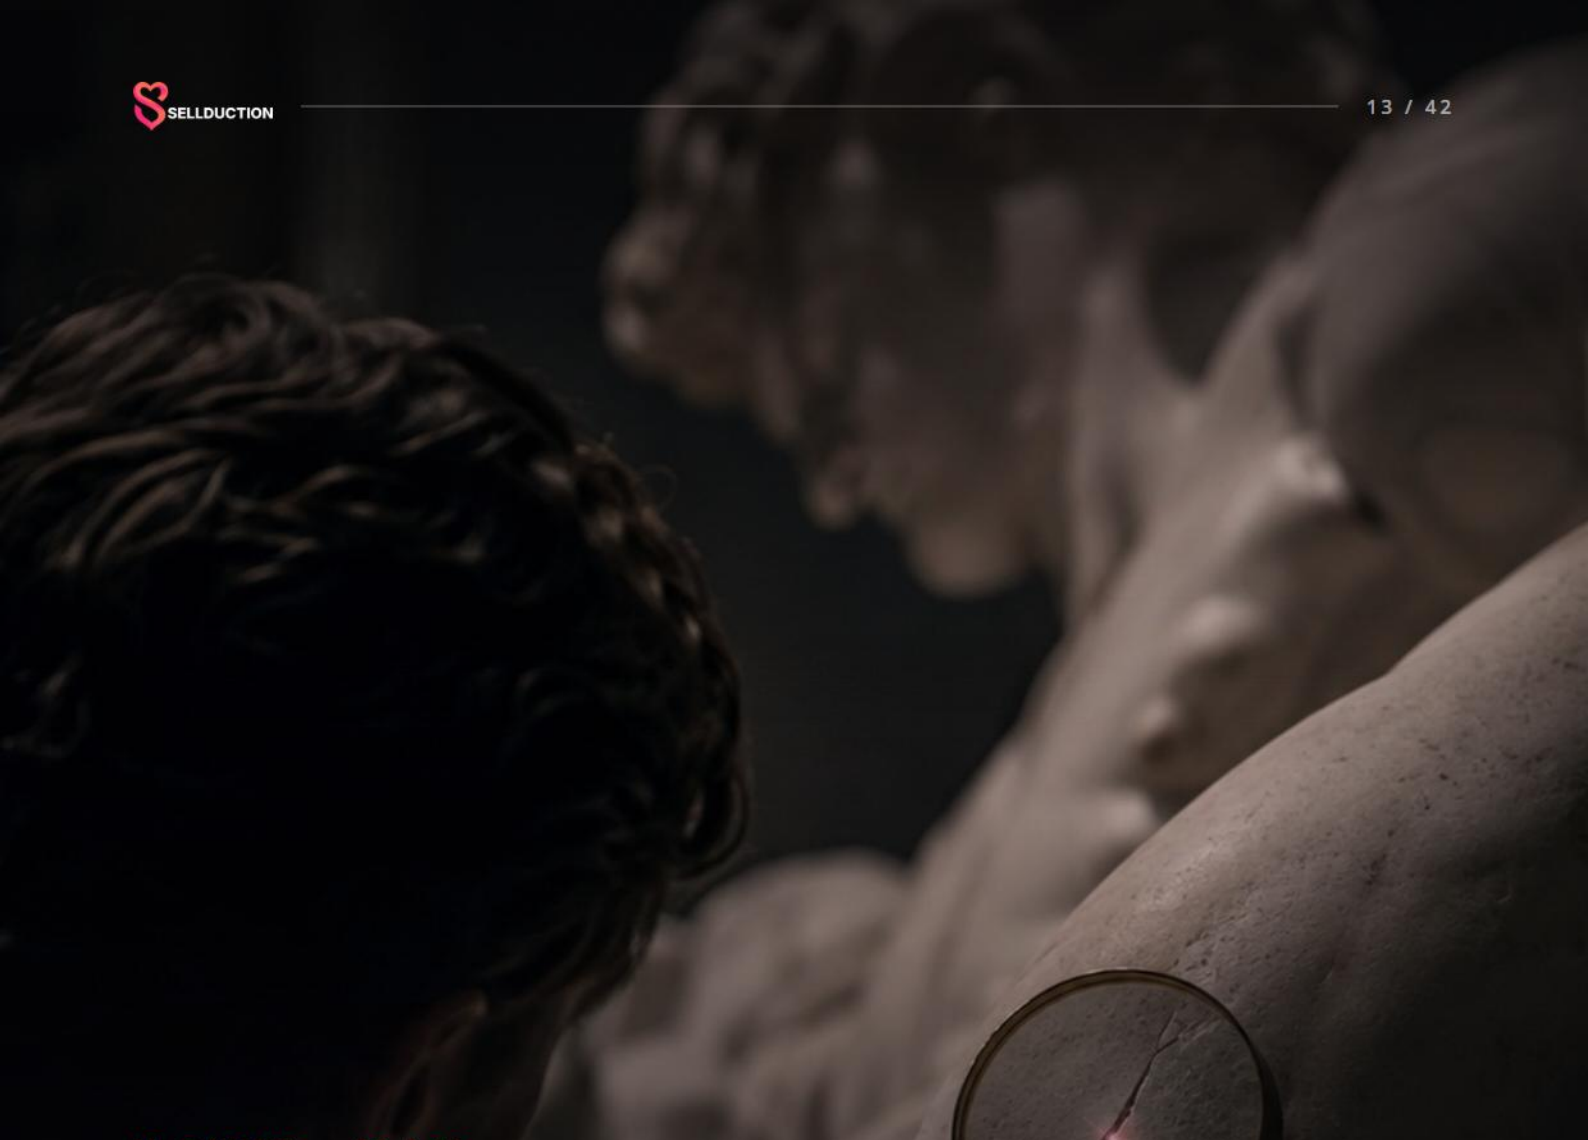

Netflix and traumas on repeat. Your empathy is the fuel.

- Over the first coffee you already know his therapist's name and why he quit her.
- He texts at two in the morning. Not to see you. So you are awake with him.
- He does not want to get better. He wants company where he is.

WHAT IT COSTS YOU

You become his on-call therapist. When you need support, you discover he has none to give.

> You are not an emotional rehabilitation centre.

IN DATING · 05 / 30

The Opinionated Critic

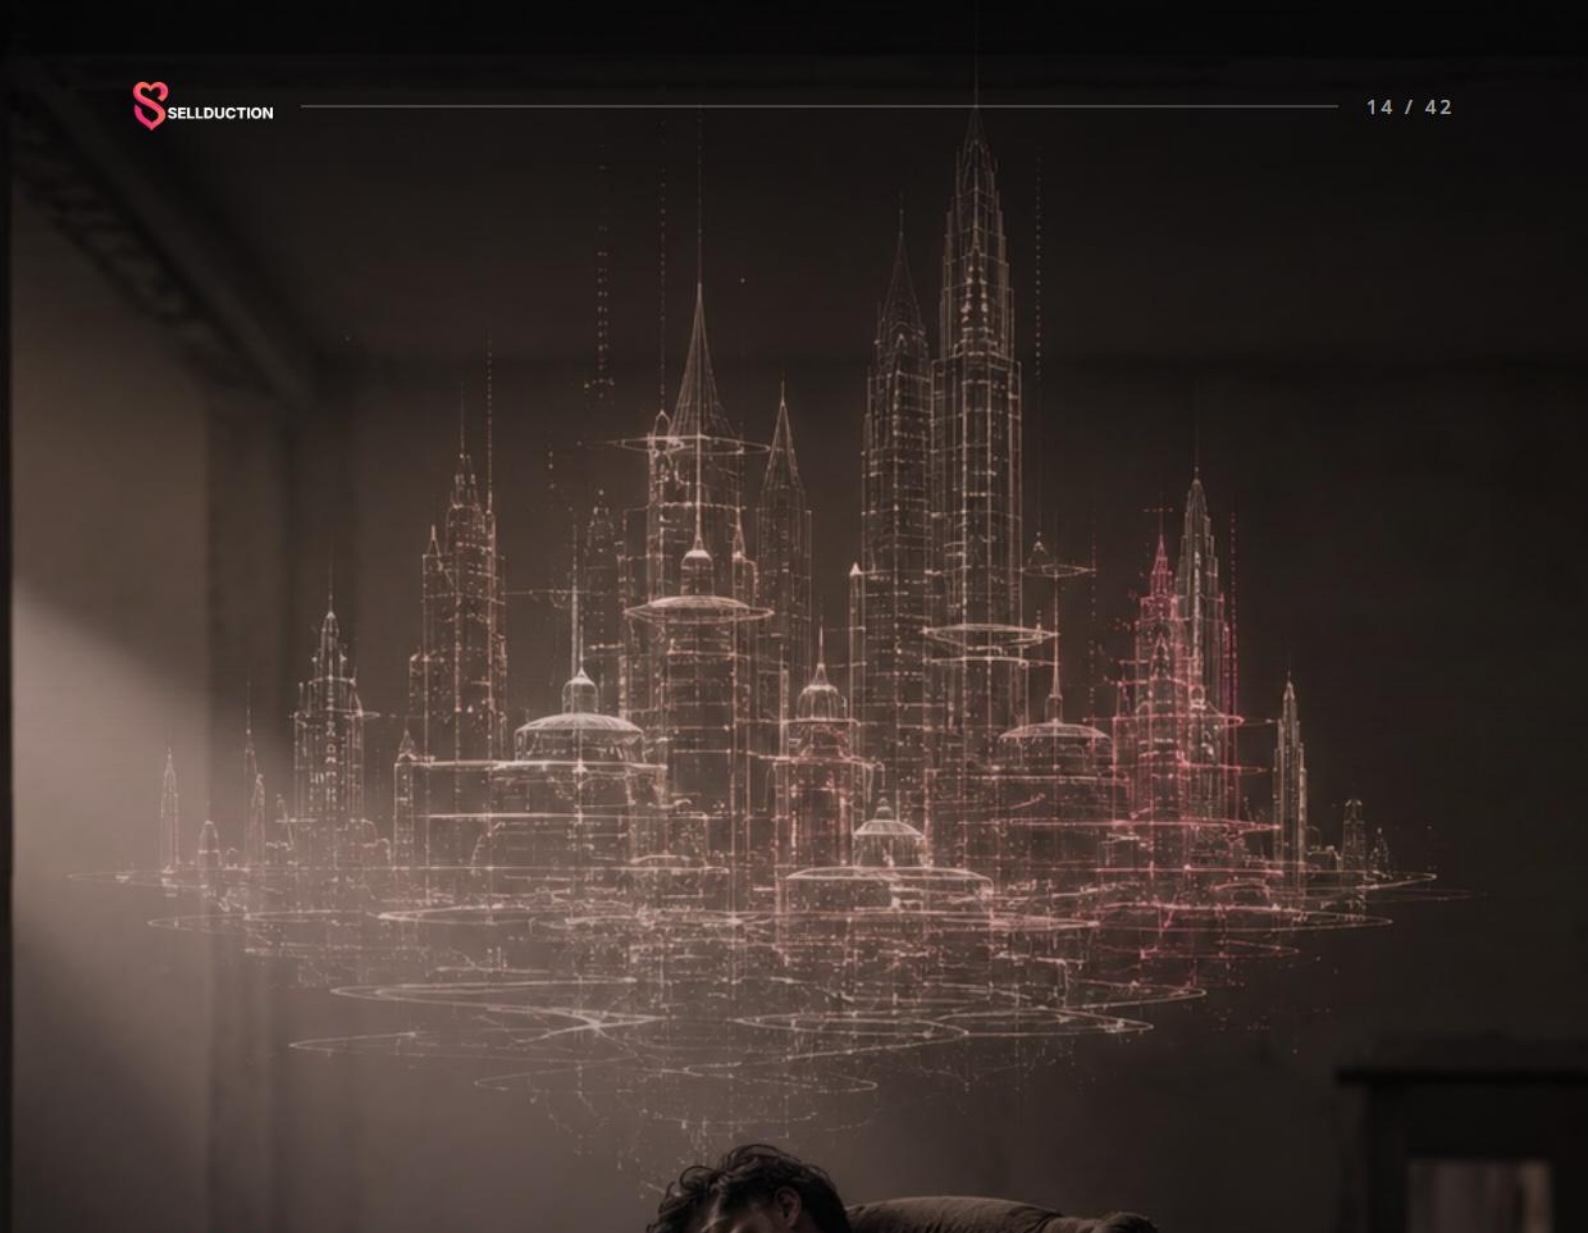

Never criticises. Just tells you what he would do if he were you.

- He told you your hair would suit you differently. On the second date.
- He never criticises. He merely “observes”.
- Six months in, you no longer know what you like.

WHAT IT COSTS YOU

You start justifying every decision. Confidence erodes through a thousand reasonable observations.

> Behind the mask of reason sits a need for control.

IN DATING · 06 / 30

The Passive Dreamer

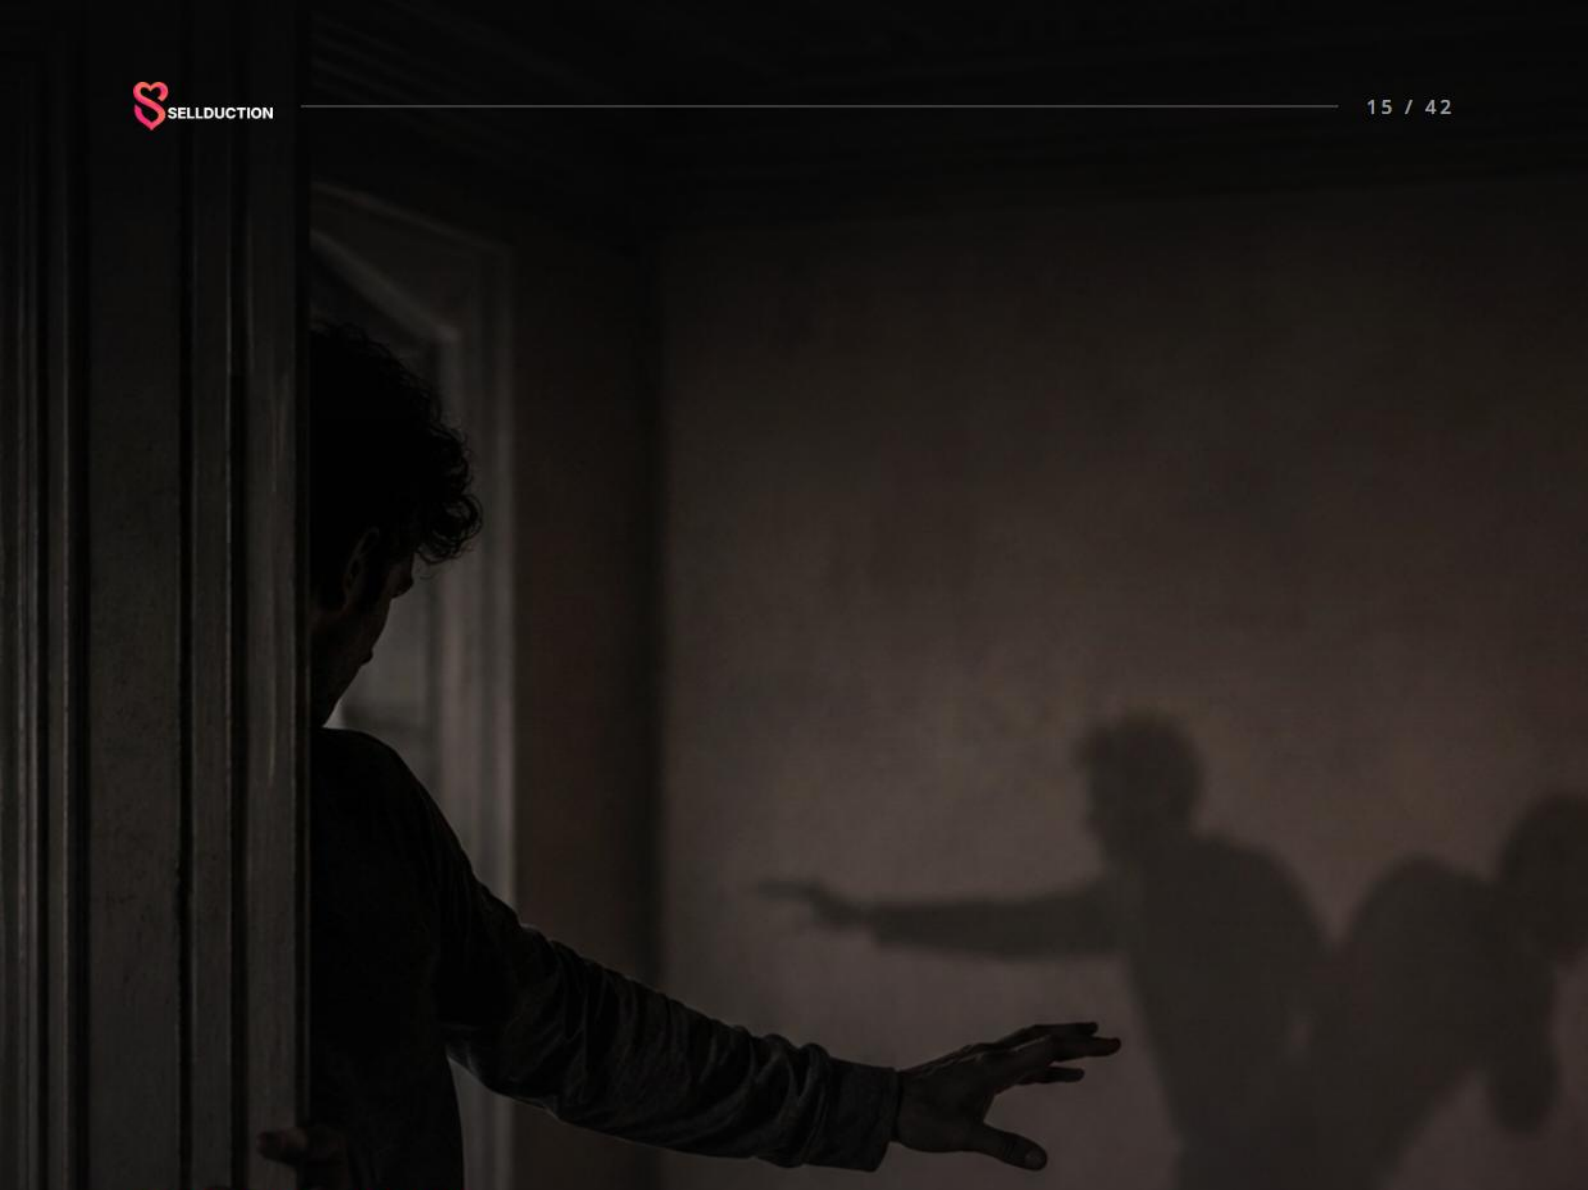

Grand plans. Zero action. For five years running.

- He has a five-year plan. He has had it for seven years.
- He describes the future in such detail that you forget to ask about the present.
- The domain is bought. The site is not.

WHAT IT COSTS YOU

He occupies your pipeline with an opportunity that exists only in conversation.

> A dream without action is just pleasant conversation.

IN DATING · 07 / 30

The Shy Passive

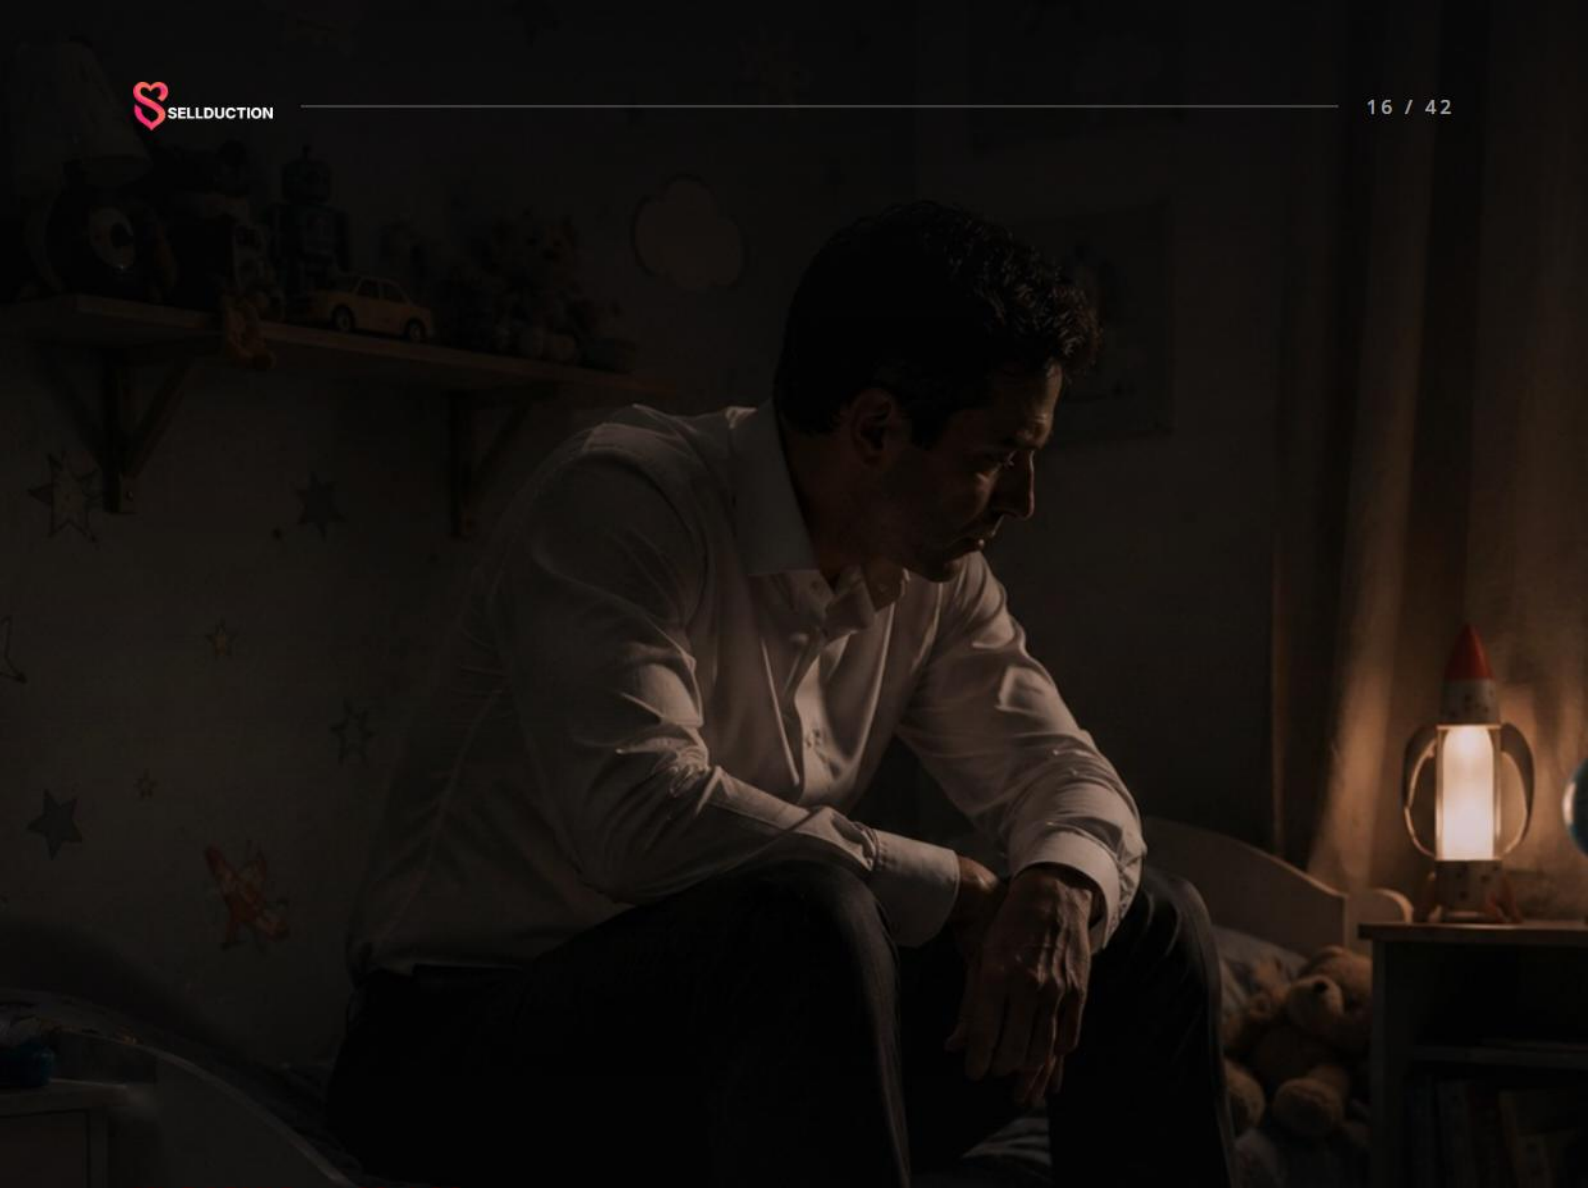

Wants it. Never says it. Then blames you for not guessing.

- He never says what he wants. But he knows precisely what you failed to give.
- "Do whatever you like" is a trap. You learned that late.
- His fragility becomes, somehow, your job.

WHAT IT COSTS YOU

You invest in something you never confirmed, because nobody ever said anything explicit.

> Fragility can be a form of control too.

IN DATING · 08 / 30

Peter Pan

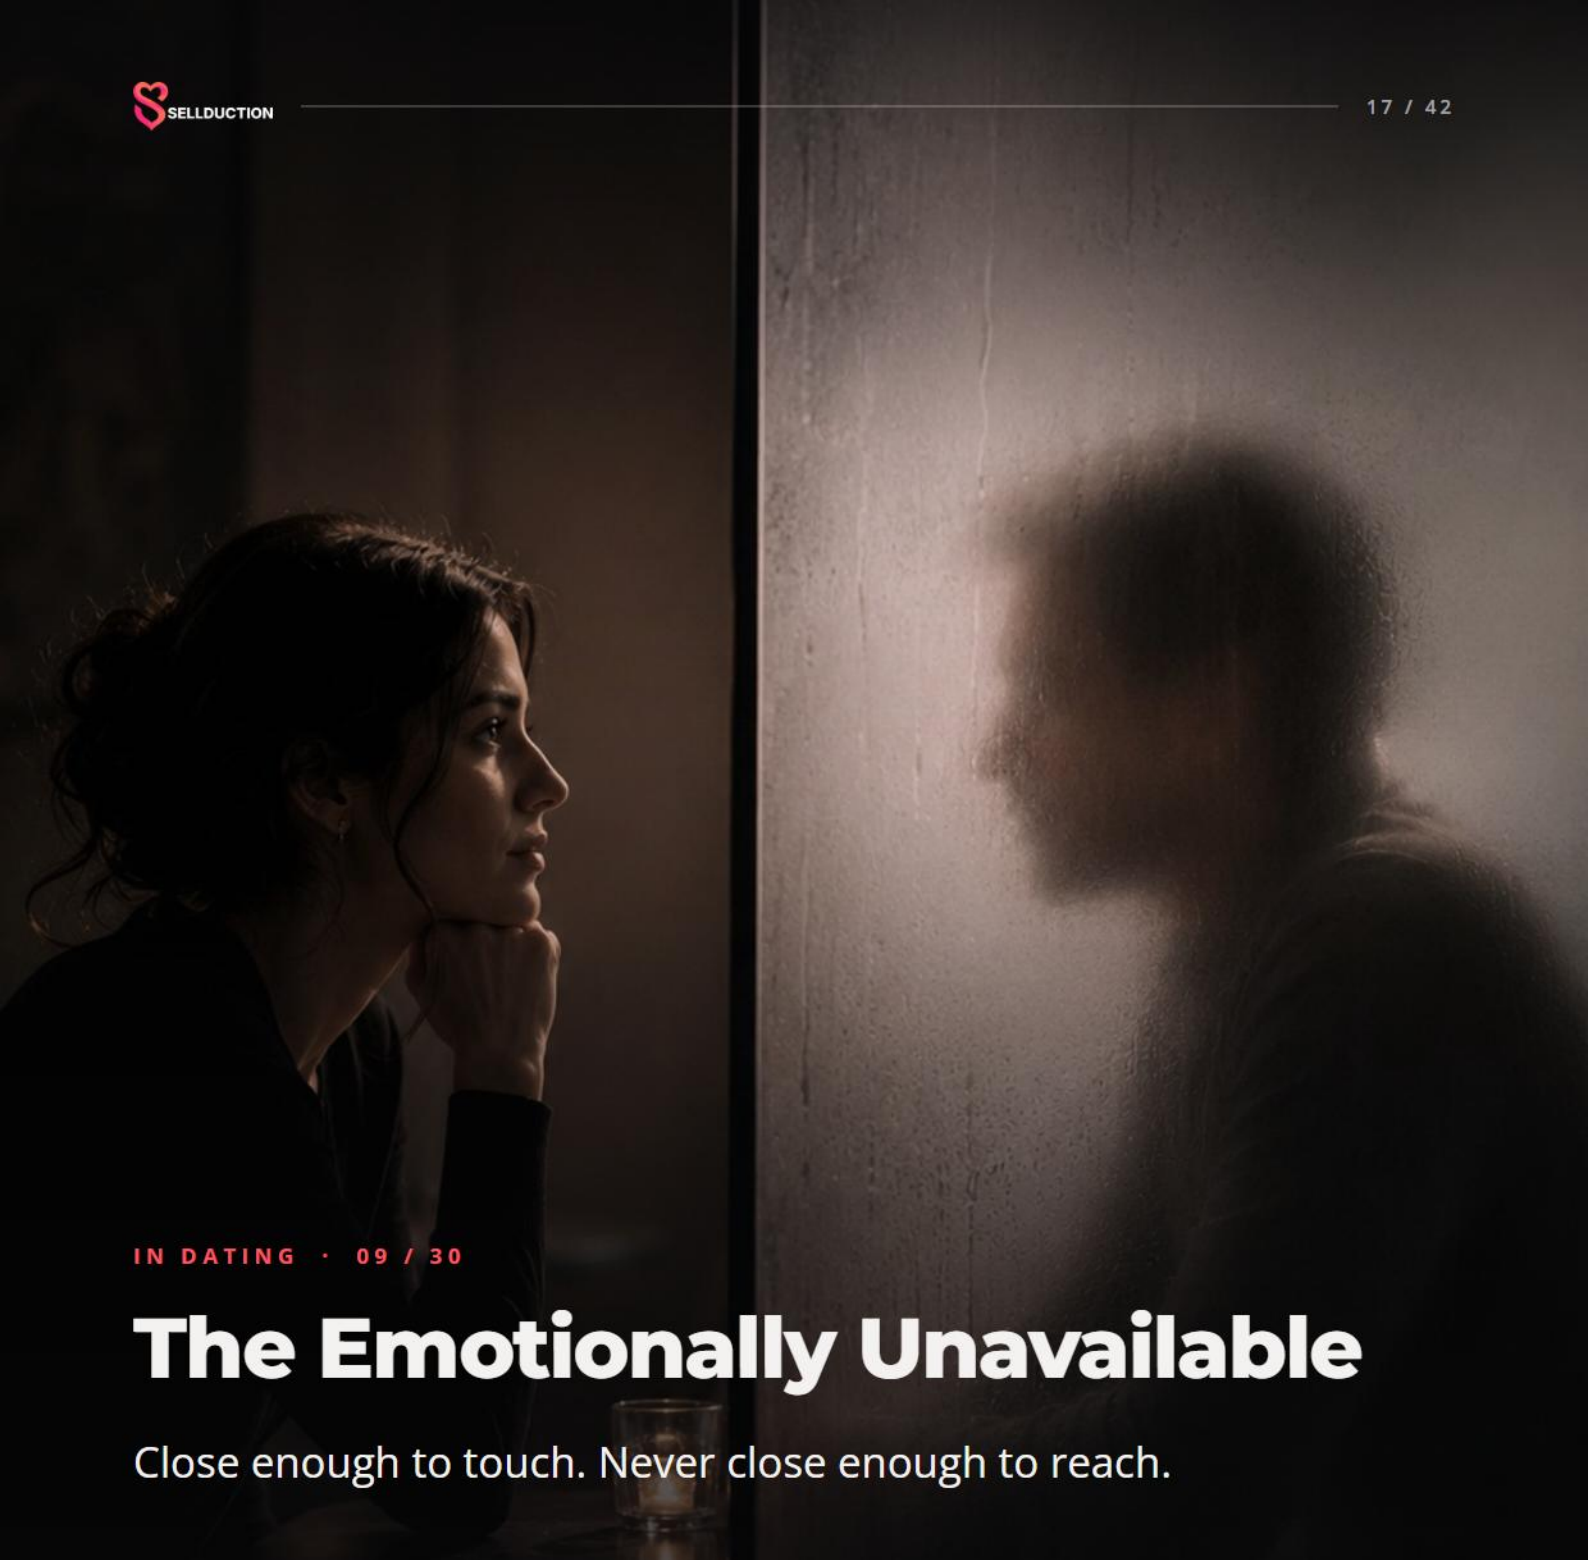

He is not looking for a partner. He is looking for a caretaker.

- He is thirty-eight and has a flatmate. By choice, he says.
- He likes that you are “organised”. What he means is that he is not.
- First real crisis, and you discover you were the only adult in the room.

WHAT IT COSTS YOU

You become the adult in the relationship, in both senses. You carry his weight too.

Not looking for an equal. Looking for a parent.

IN DATING · 09 / 30

The Emotionally Unavailable

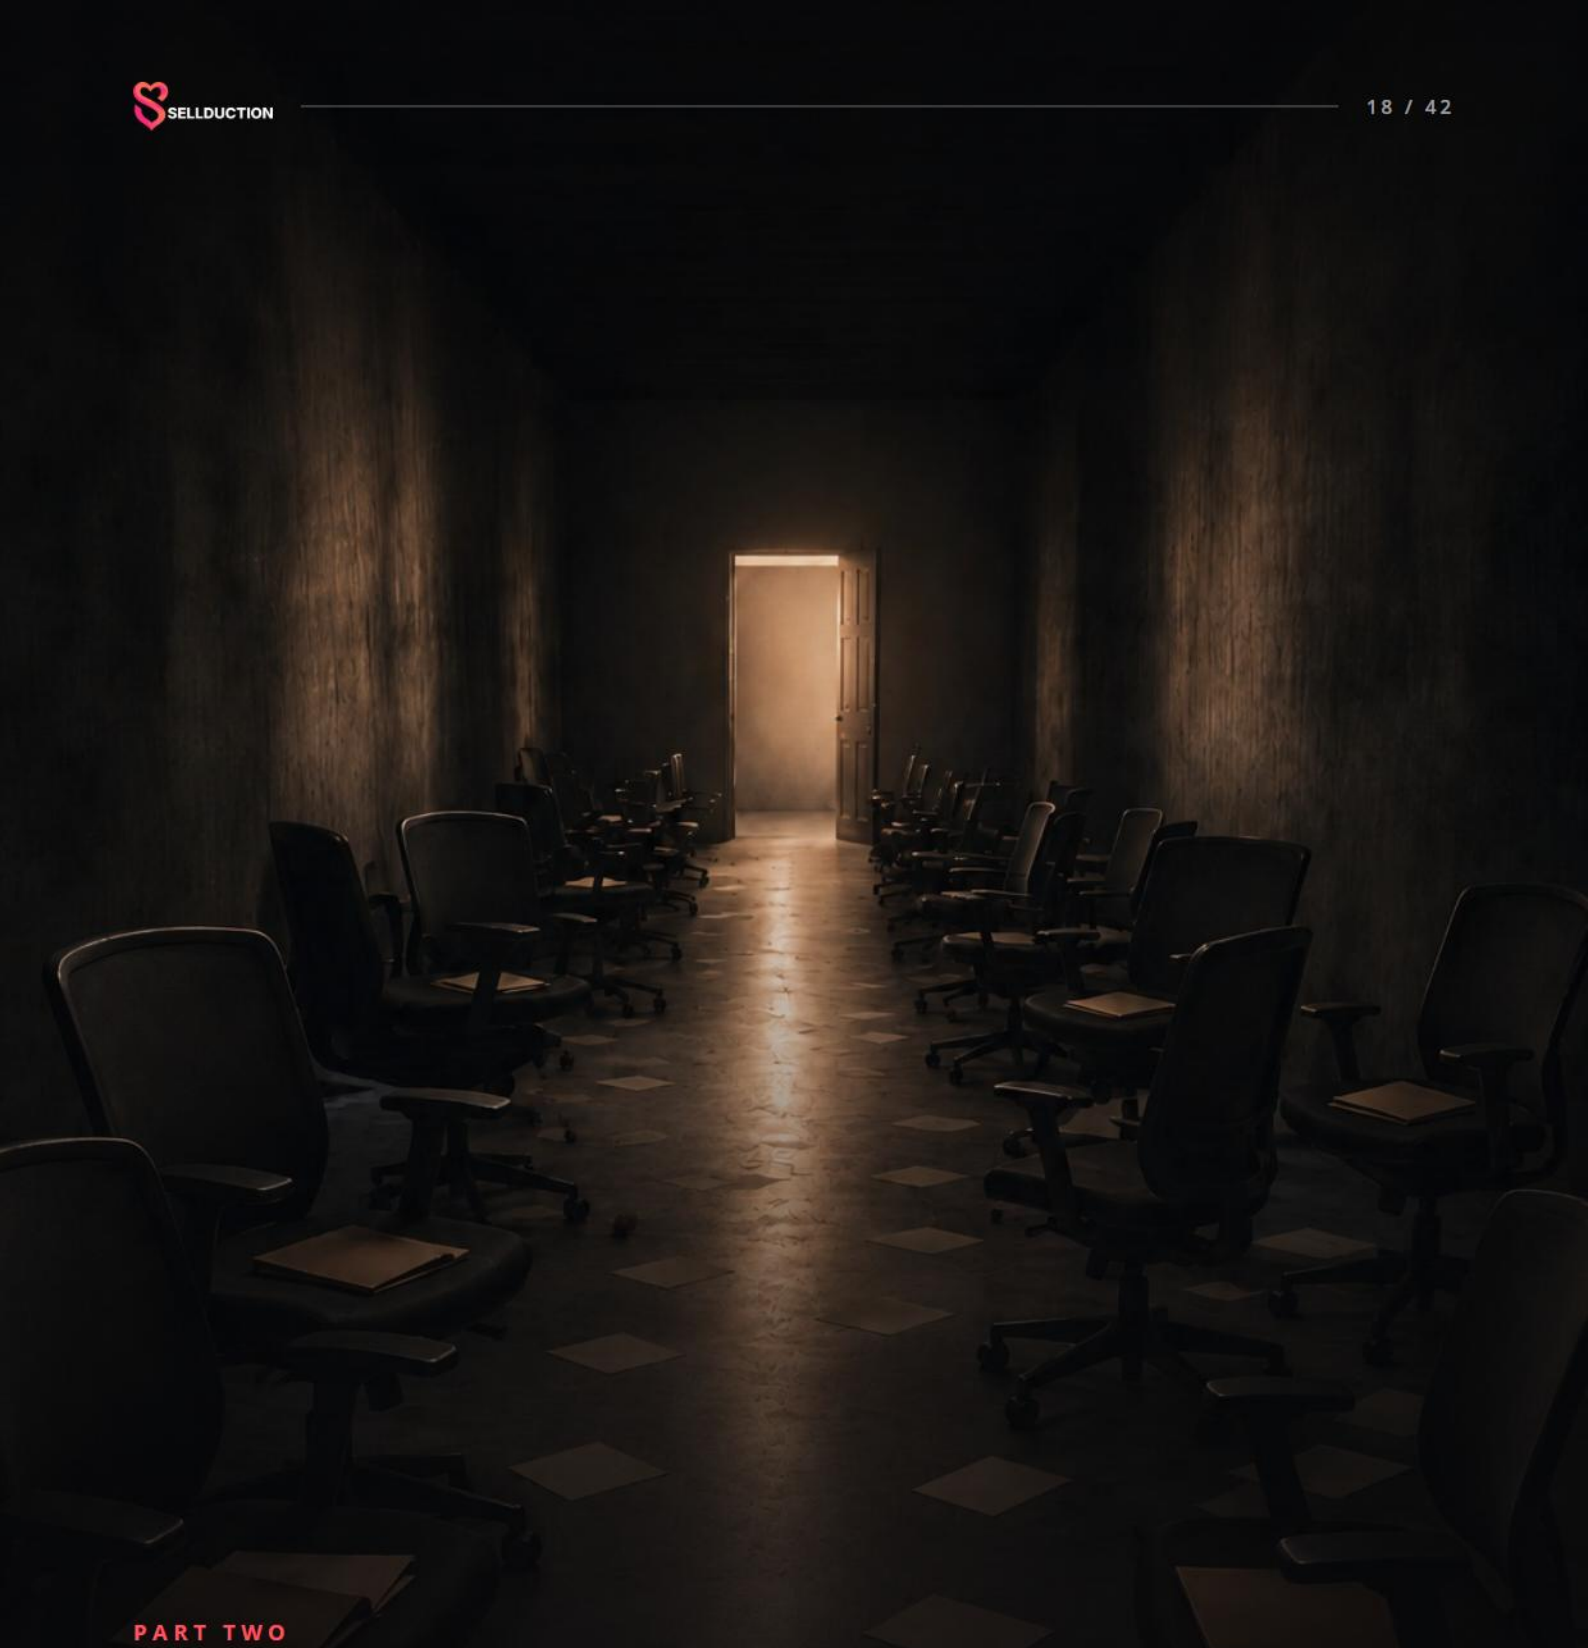

Close enough to touch. Never close enough to reach.

- He answers every message. None of them says anything.
- Two years in, and you still do not know what frightens him.
- He does not keep you at a distance. He simply never closes it.

WHAT IT COSTS YOU

You mistake presence for commitment. They are entirely different things.

> He is there. But he is not there.

PART TWO

The twenty-one from sales

The pseudo-clients. They drain time, energy and resources while giving nothing back. They are already in your pipeline.

IN SALES · 10 / 30

The Schemer

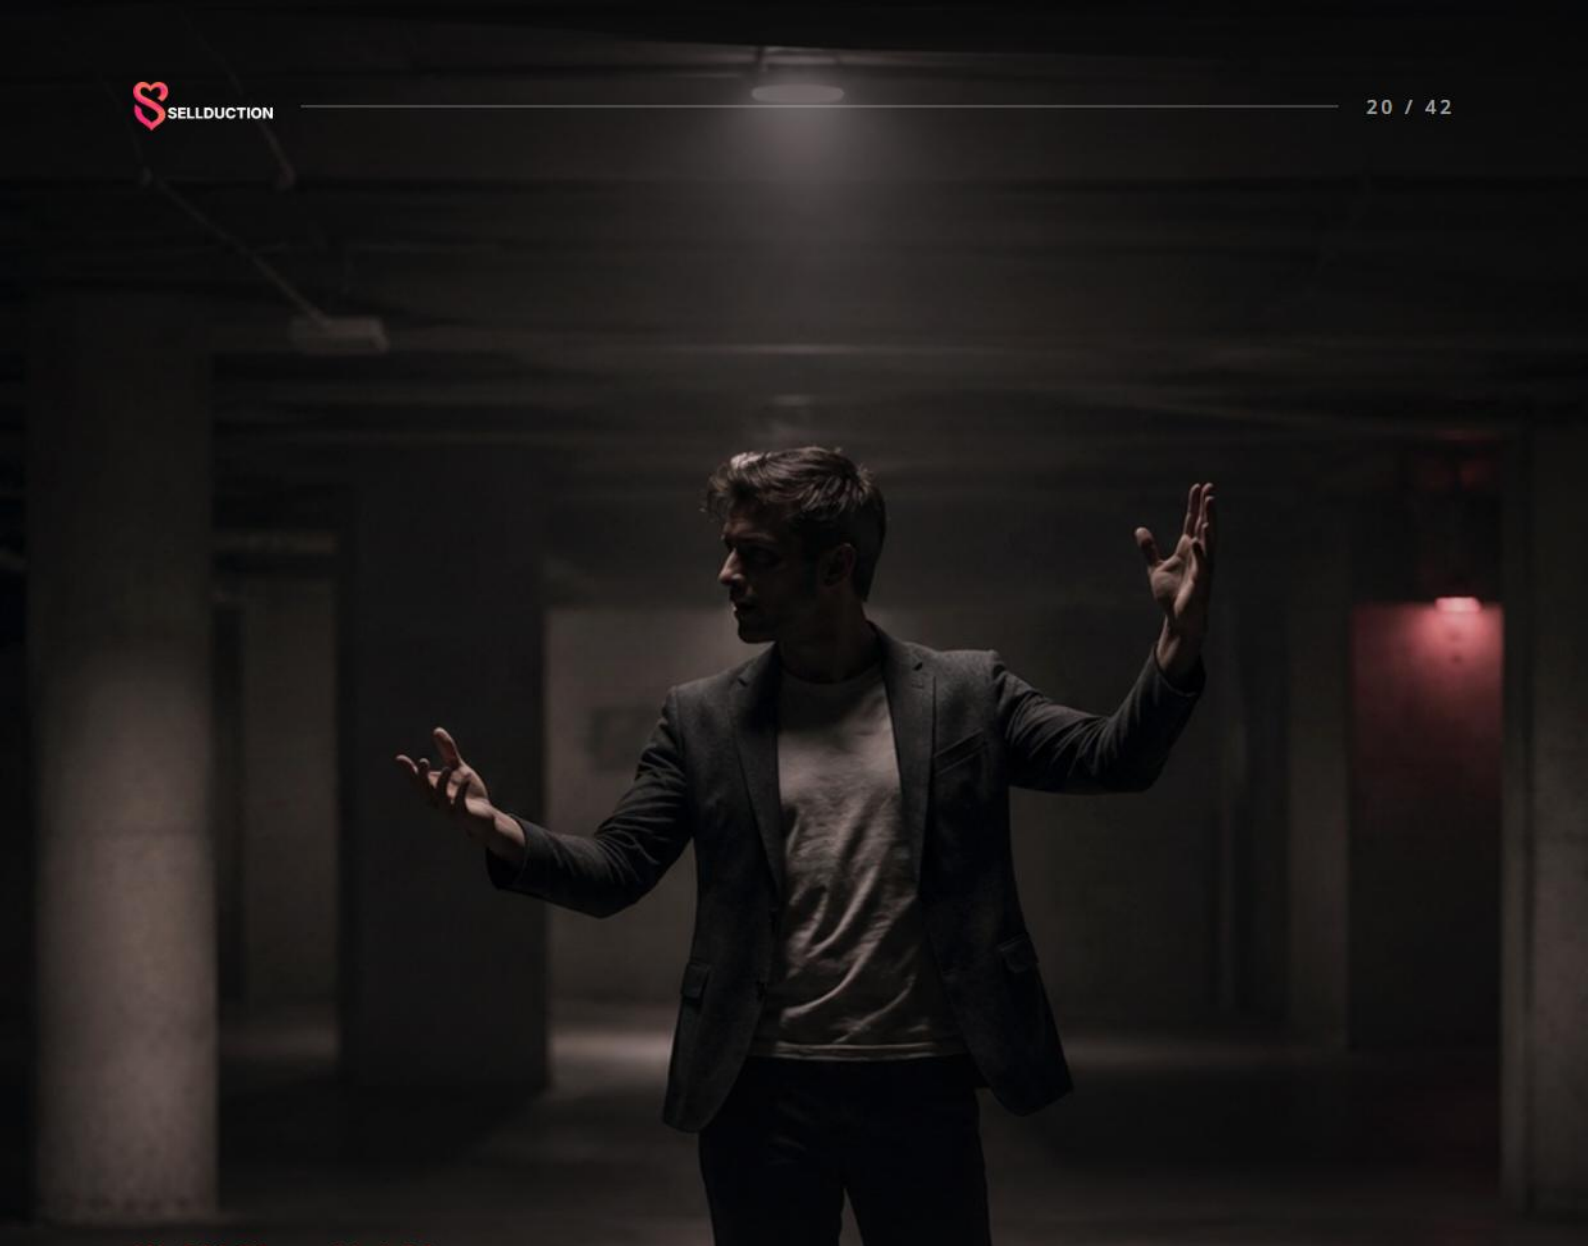

Promises you the moon. Materialises nothing.

- He has three businesses. None of them has a bank account.
- "I will connect you with the right people." It never happens.
- He sells enthusiasm. Unfortunately, you wanted a contract.

WHAT IT COSTS YOU

You are left with a bitter taste and lost time. Never with a contract.

> Adaptability without delivery is just survival.

IN SALES · 11 / 30

The Notorious Liar

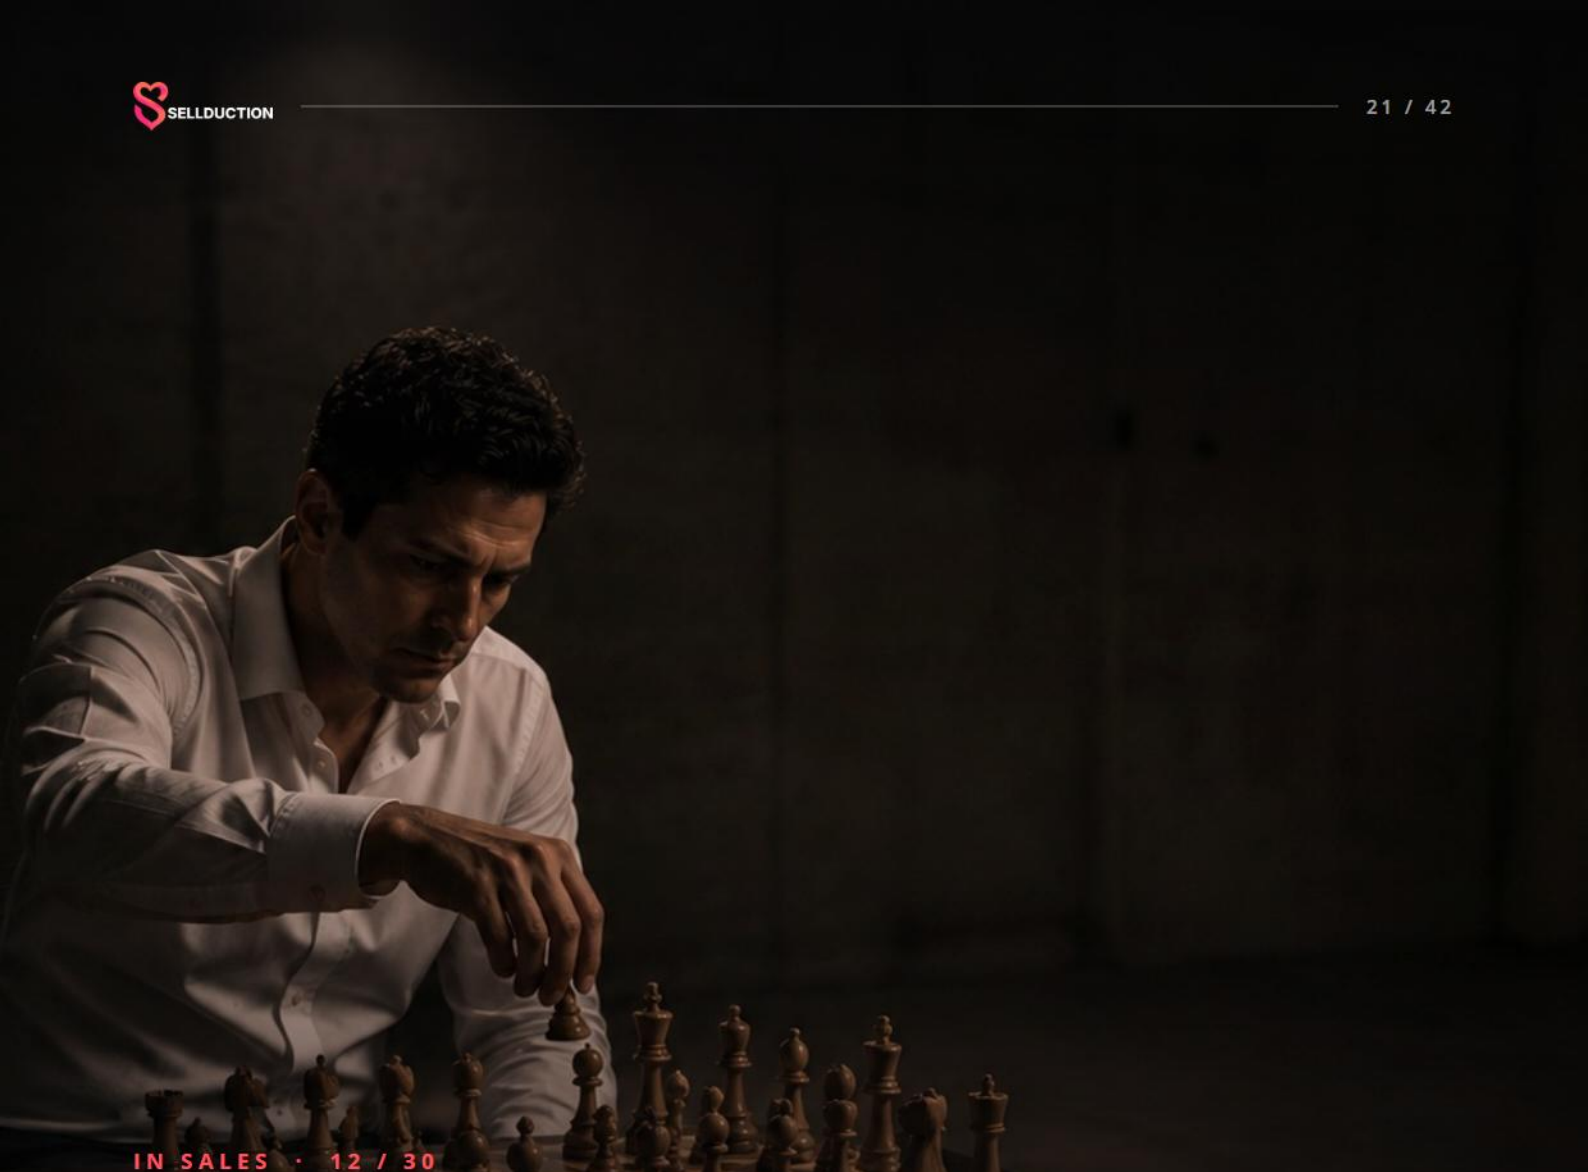

King of nowhere. And nowhere is empty.

- He has worked with everyone. Nobody remembers him.
- His numbers change between the first meeting and the third.
- You look him up and find a different biography.

WHAT IT COSTS YOU

You build an offer on information that never existed.

> You will recognise him by the unjustified air of grandeur.

IN SALES · 12 / 30

The Tireless Manipulator

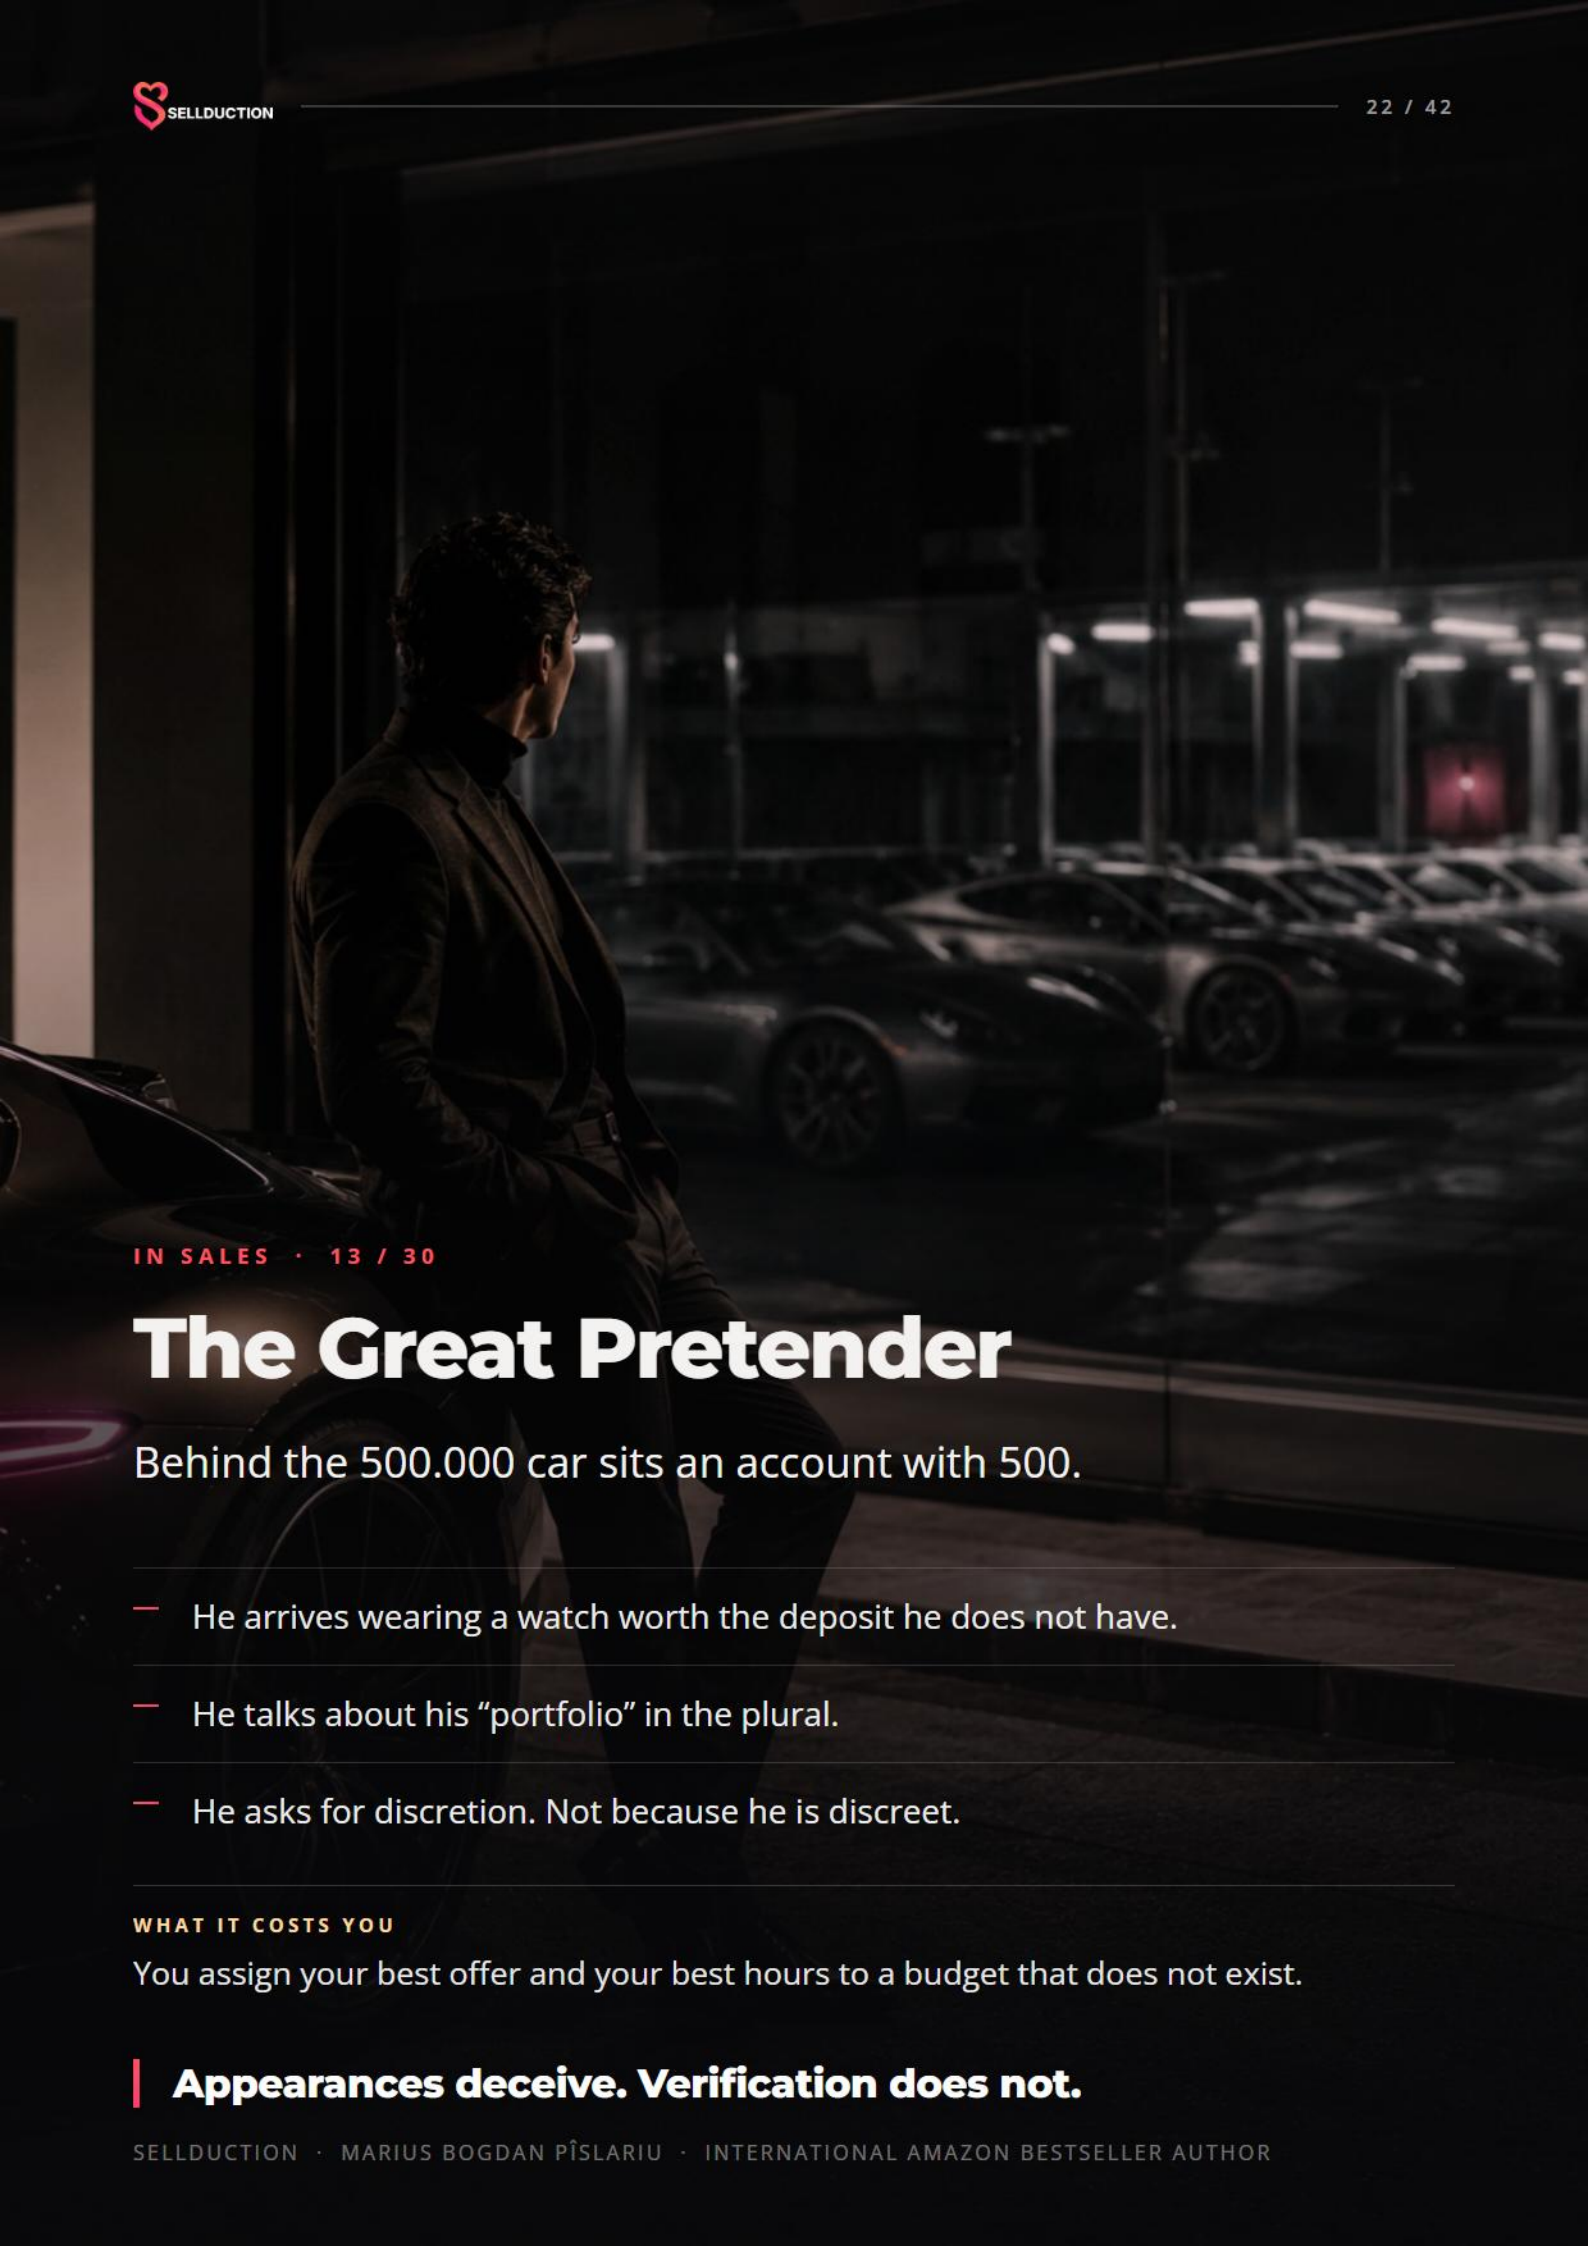

That “something” that ruins your vibe from the start.

- First meeting he tells you how much he values you. Second, how much you cost.
- Every favour arrives with interest.
- He does not negotiate. He tests how much you fold.

WHAT IT COSTS YOU

He ruins your instinct on day one and you stay anyway, because you assumed you were overreacting.

> If you have a hint of intuition, you feel him instantly. Listen to it.

IN SALES · 13 / 30

The Great Pretender

Behind the 500.000 car sits an account with 500.

- He arrives wearing a watch worth the deposit he does not have.
- He talks about his “portfolio” in the plural.
- He asks for discretion. Not because he is discreet.

WHAT IT COSTS YOU

You assign your best offer and your best hours to a budget that does not exist.

> Appearances deceive. Verification does not.

IN SALES · 14 / 30

The Vocational Ghoster

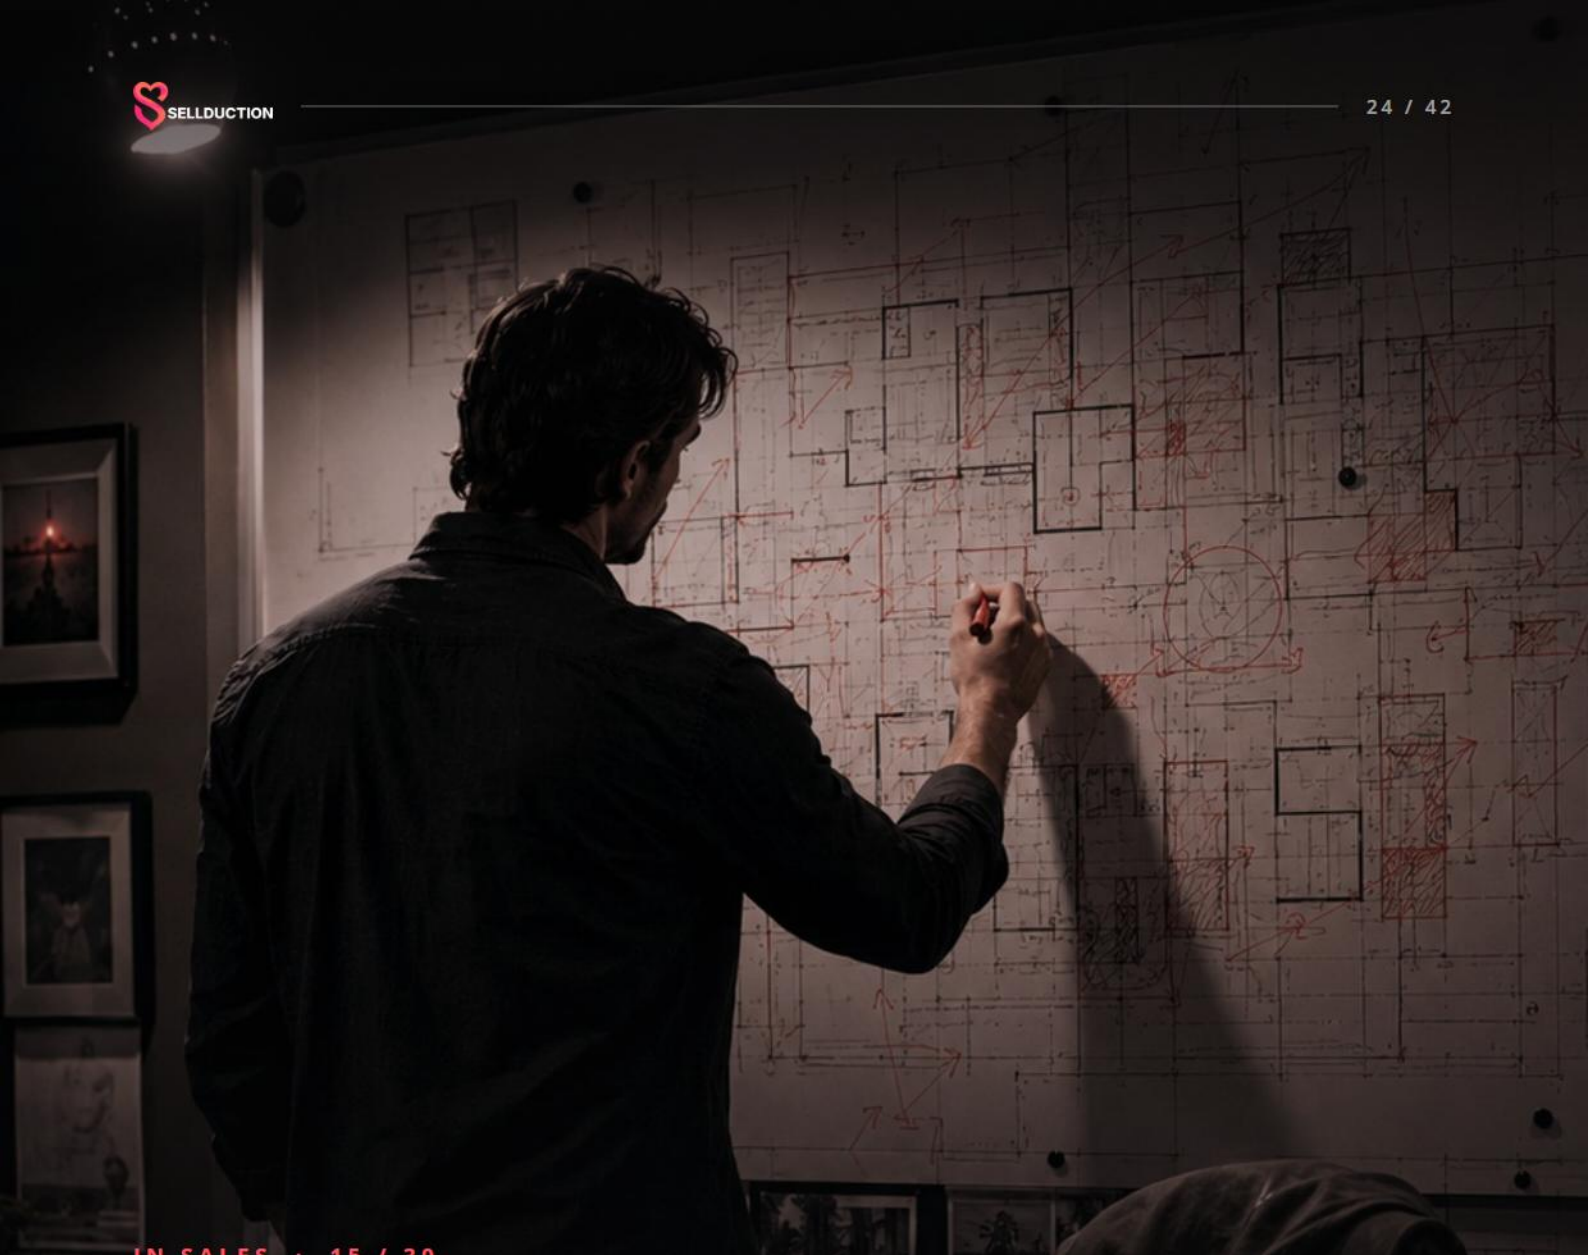

He was there. He said yes. He felt the vibe. He vanished.

- "Send me the projections too." You did. That was the last of it.
- Read at 09:14. The end.
- Four months later he likes a post. That is all.

WHAT IT COSTS YOU

You delivered everything and got silence, and silence never tells you what went wrong. That is the expensive part.

> "I am not ignoring you, I am ghosting you at expert level."

IN SALES · 15 / 30

The Unqualified Coach

Buys nothing. But knows exactly how you should sell.

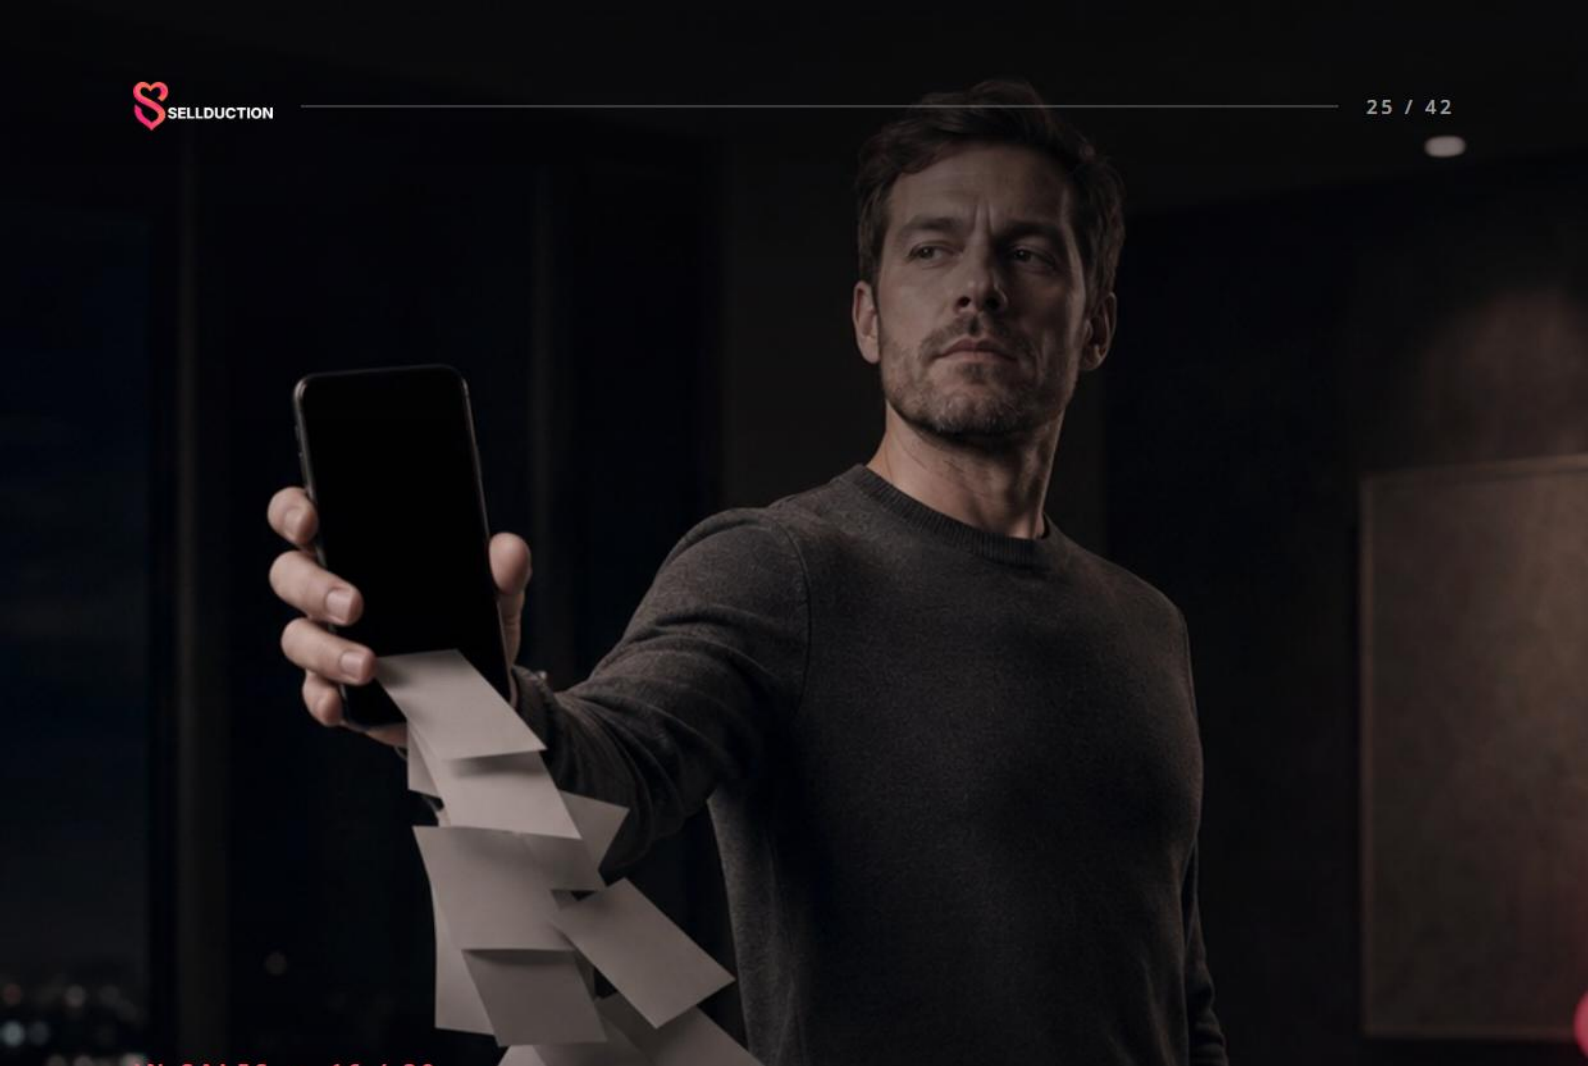

- He corrected your deck before he had seen the end of it.
- He has no company. He has opinions about yours.
- Your selling hour became his professional therapy hour.

WHAT IT COSTS YOU

He spends your selling hour rehearsing his authority on you.

> "I am not criticising, I am just telling you what I would do."

SELLDUCTION · MARIUS BOGDAN PÎSLARIU · INTERNATIONAL AMAZON BESTSELLER AUTHOR

IN SALES · 16 / 30

The “Everything on WhatsApp” Client

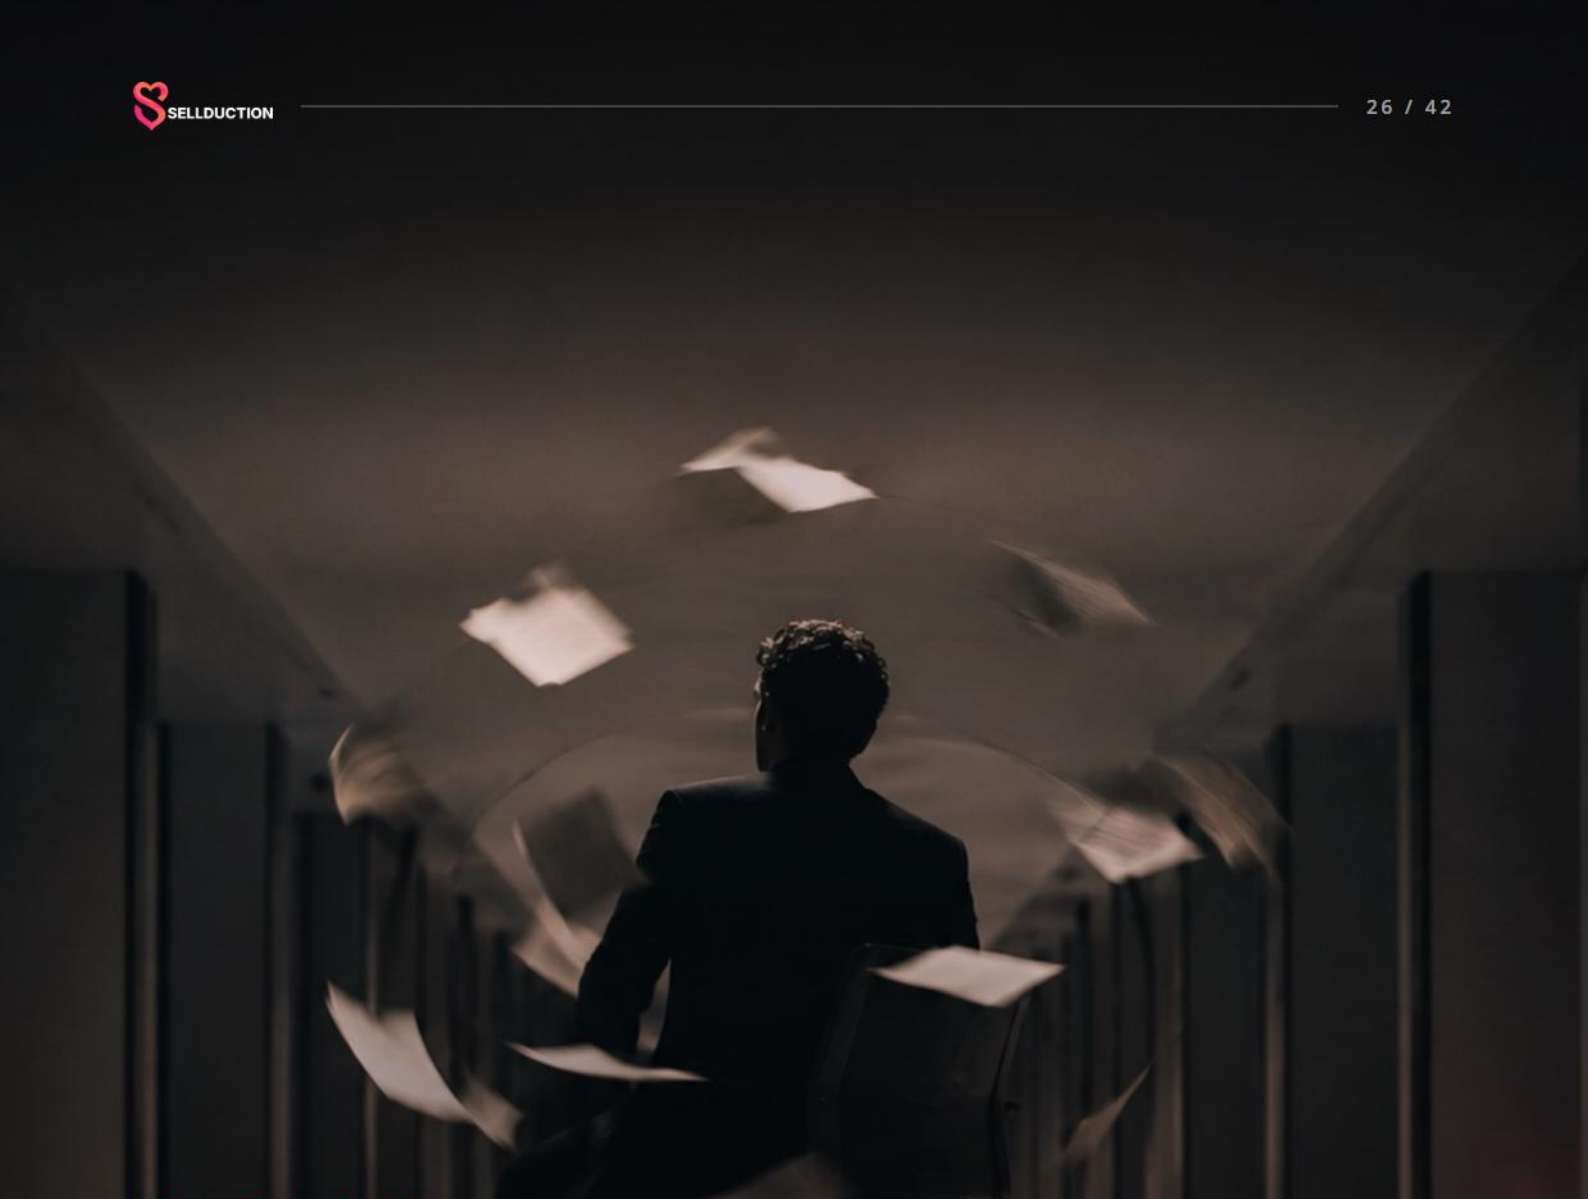

In PDF. But also voice. But short. But detailed.

- Asks for the PDF. You send it. Asks you to explain it on voice note.
- Writes at 23:40 and is annoyed you did not reply at 23:41.
- A month later: “hi, could you send that again?”

WHAT IT COSTS YOU

You fragment your day into three-minute pieces for someone who has decided nothing.

> When you hear “what else have you got?”, you already have your answer.

IN SALES · 17 / 30

The Ping-pong Client

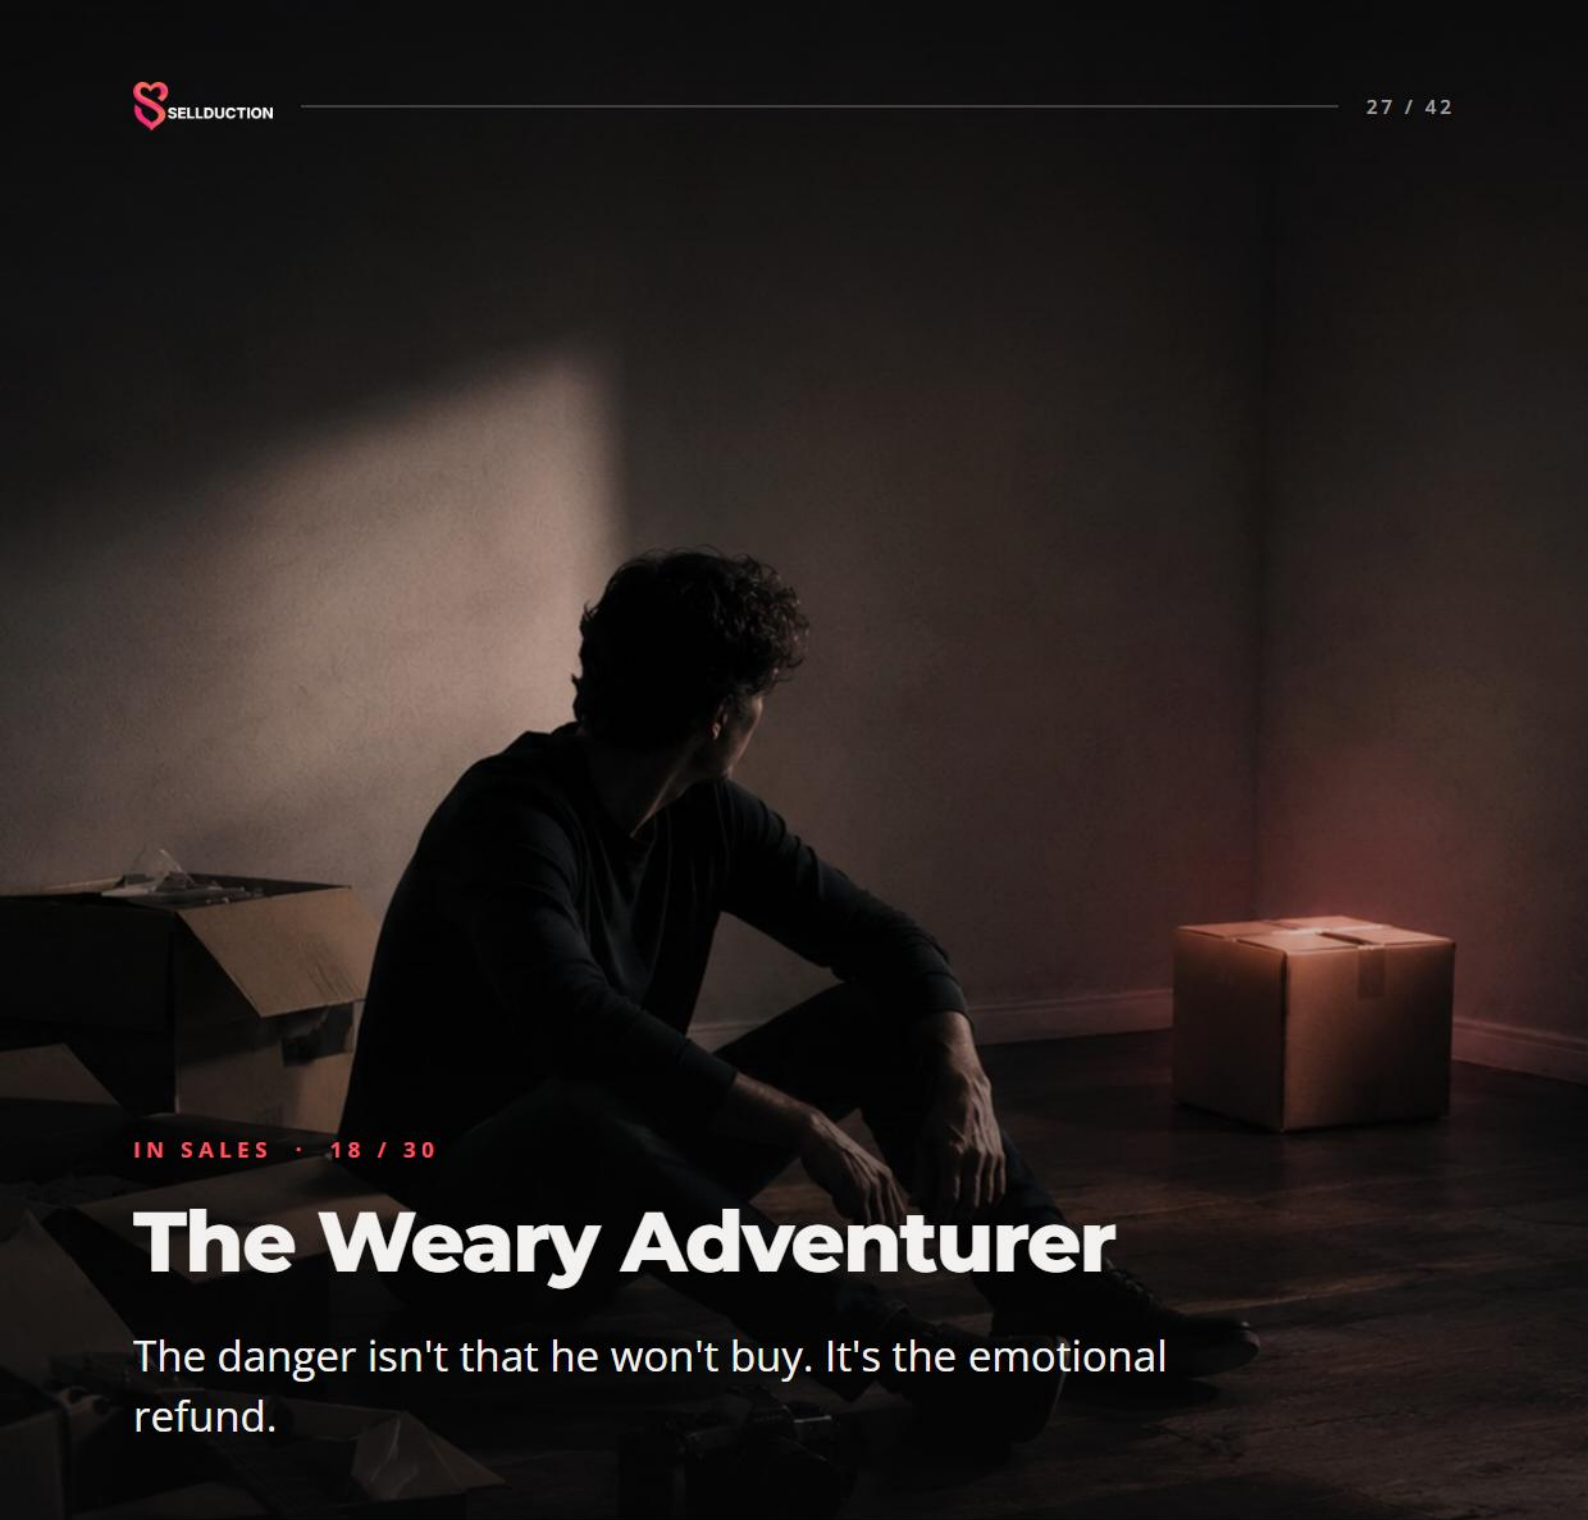

Doesn't get in your way. Just takes months off your life.

- "Let's revisit after the holidays." Which holidays, he did not specify.
- He has been in your pipeline so long you have changed his status four times.
- He will not say no, because no would end the conversation. And he wants the conversation.

WHAT IT COSTS YOU

He seems soft and harmless, which is exactly why he never leaves your pipeline.

> Not a no. A no that costs more.

IN SALES · 18 / 30

The Weary Adventurer

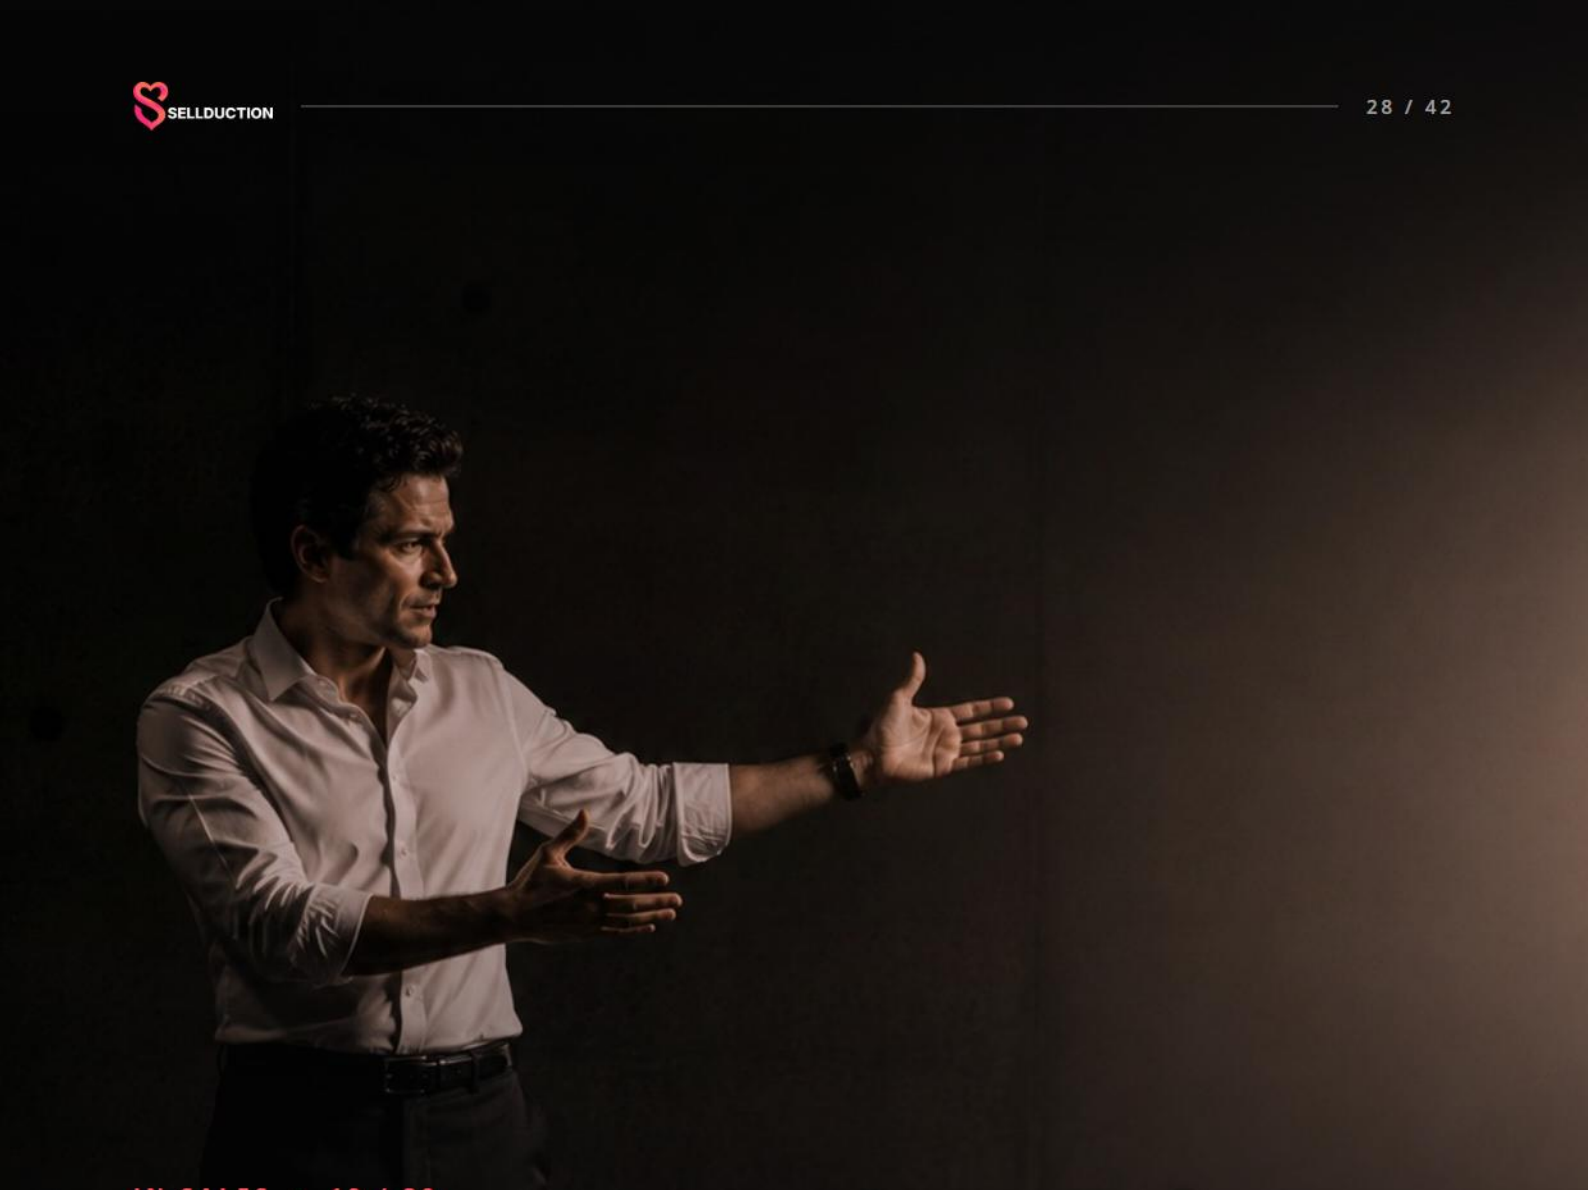

The danger isn't that he won't buy. It's the emotional refund.

- Day one: “let's start Monday.” Day four: silence.
- He signed up for three things this week. He finished none last year.
- He does not ask for his money back. He asks for your enthusiasm back.

WHAT IT COSTS YOU

You treat him as a warm lead because he seems passionate. That passion has a three-day shelf life.

> Like a child who has opened a toy.

IN SALES · 19 / 30

The Eternal Referrer

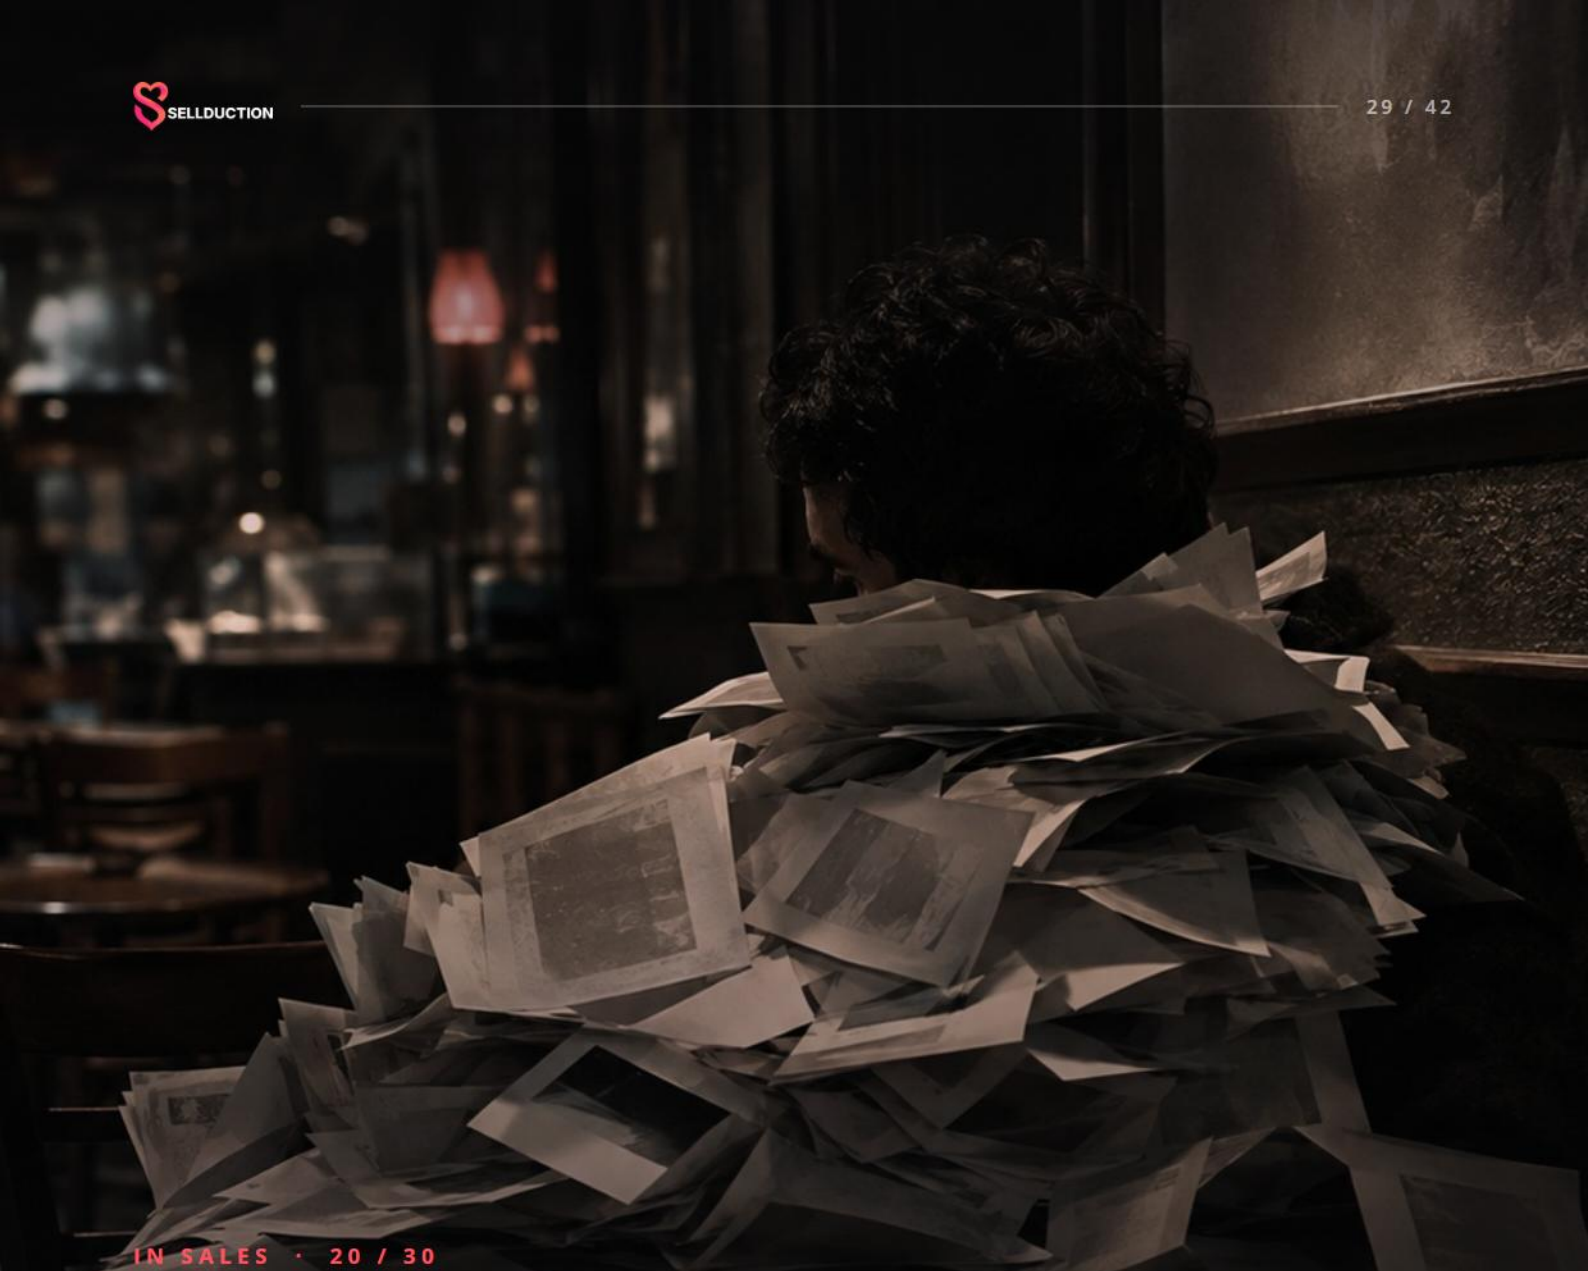

Does nothing himself. But always has “someone interested”.

- He has someone. That someone does not have him.
- “I will tell him tonight.” He said that in March.
- He wants commission on an introduction that never happened.

WHAT IT COSTS YOU

You build a forecast on a person who was never contacted.

> A referral without a name is not a referral.

IN SALES · 20 / 30

The Perpetual Questioner

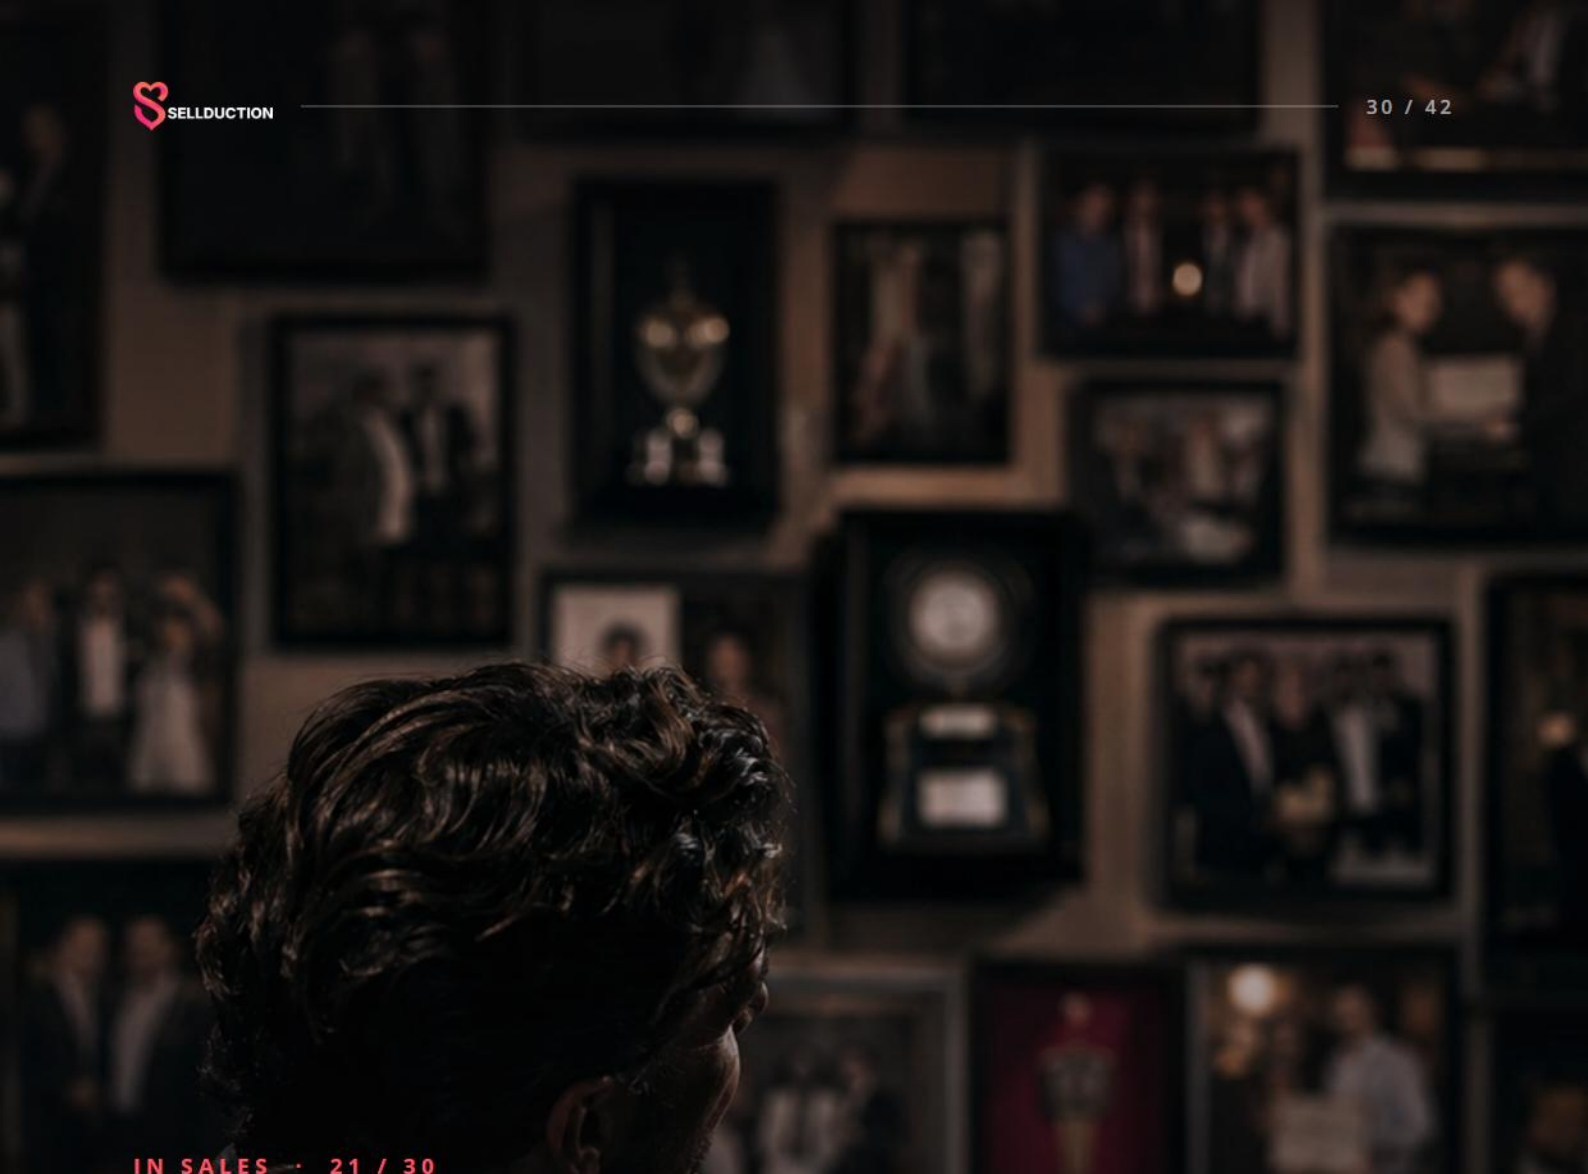

Reads 42 reviews before ordering a coffee.

- Question forty-one is a good one. The problem is the forty that follow.
- He needs “just one clarification”. Six times.
- He has all the data. He is only missing the decision.

WHAT IT COSTS YOU

You mistake interest for intent. Questions are not the same as buying.

> Set a deadline. Questions do not end on their own.

IN SALES · 21 / 30

The “I Have a Friend Who” Guy

He never did anything. But he has a friend who did.

- His friend paid less. His friend has no name.
- You are negotiating with an urban legend.
- Ask for detail and the friend becomes “someone”.

WHAT IT COSTS YOU

You negotiate with a story, not a person. Stories do not sign.

> He lives off legends and filters everything through them.

IN SALES · 22 / 30

The Emotional Time-Eater

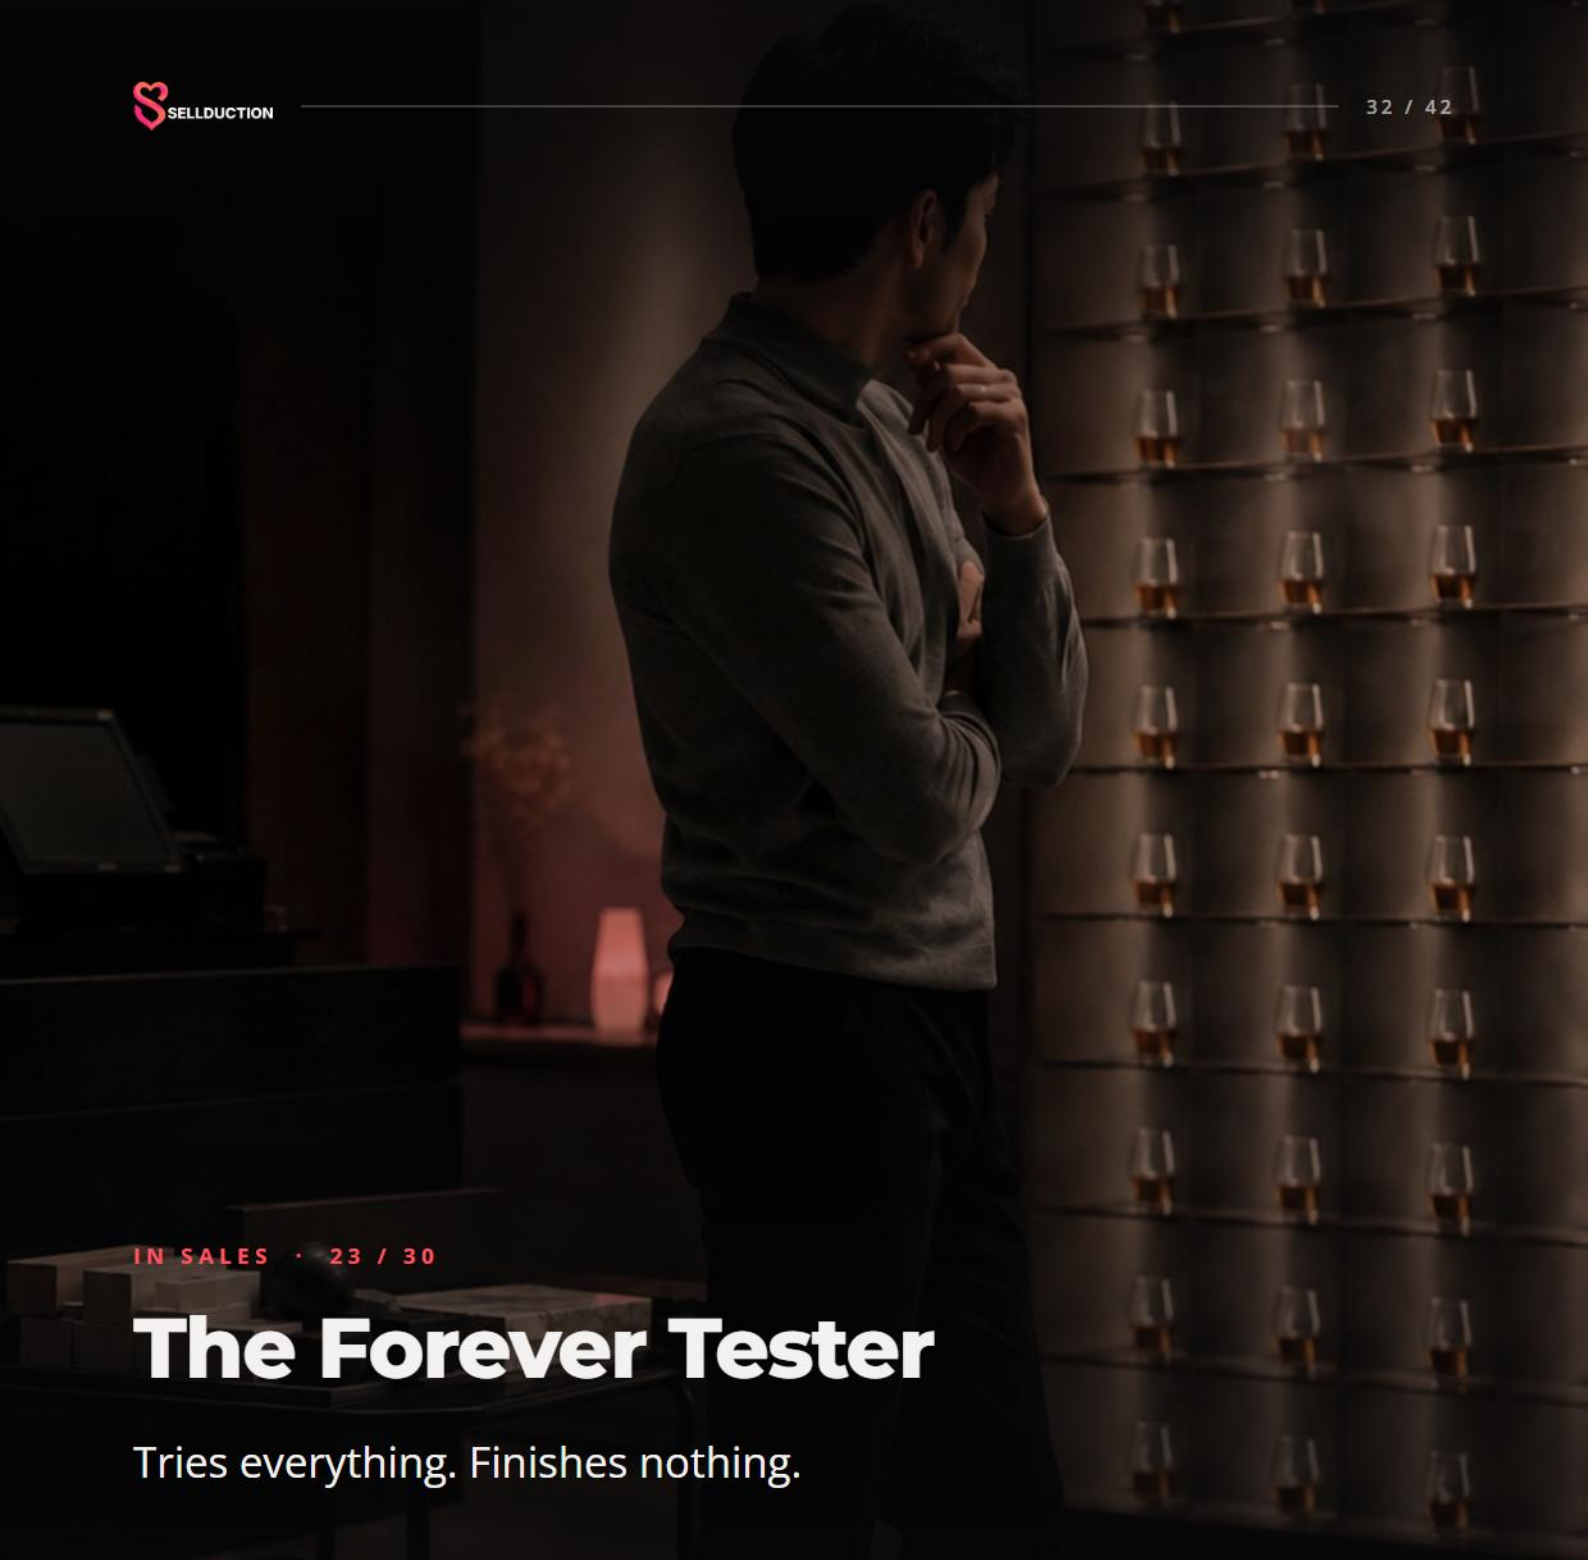

Zero conversions. Countless conversations.

- A twenty-minute call. At one hour forty you still have not reached the offer.
- You know more about his divorce than about his budget.
- He thanks you sincerely. Every time. Without ever buying.

WHAT IT COSTS YOU

He fills your calendar with hours that feel productive and produce nothing.

You are a professional, not a therapist.

IN SALES · 23 / 30

The Forever Tester

Tries everything. Finishes nothing.

- His trial has expired three times. At three different companies.
- "I just want to see what it looks like." He saw. He still is not buying.
- He collects demos the way other people collect stamps.

WHAT IT COSTS YOU

You hand over the best version of your work as a free sample, indefinitely.

> He likes "seeing what is on the market". That is all.

IN SALES · 24 / 30

The Paralysed Analyst

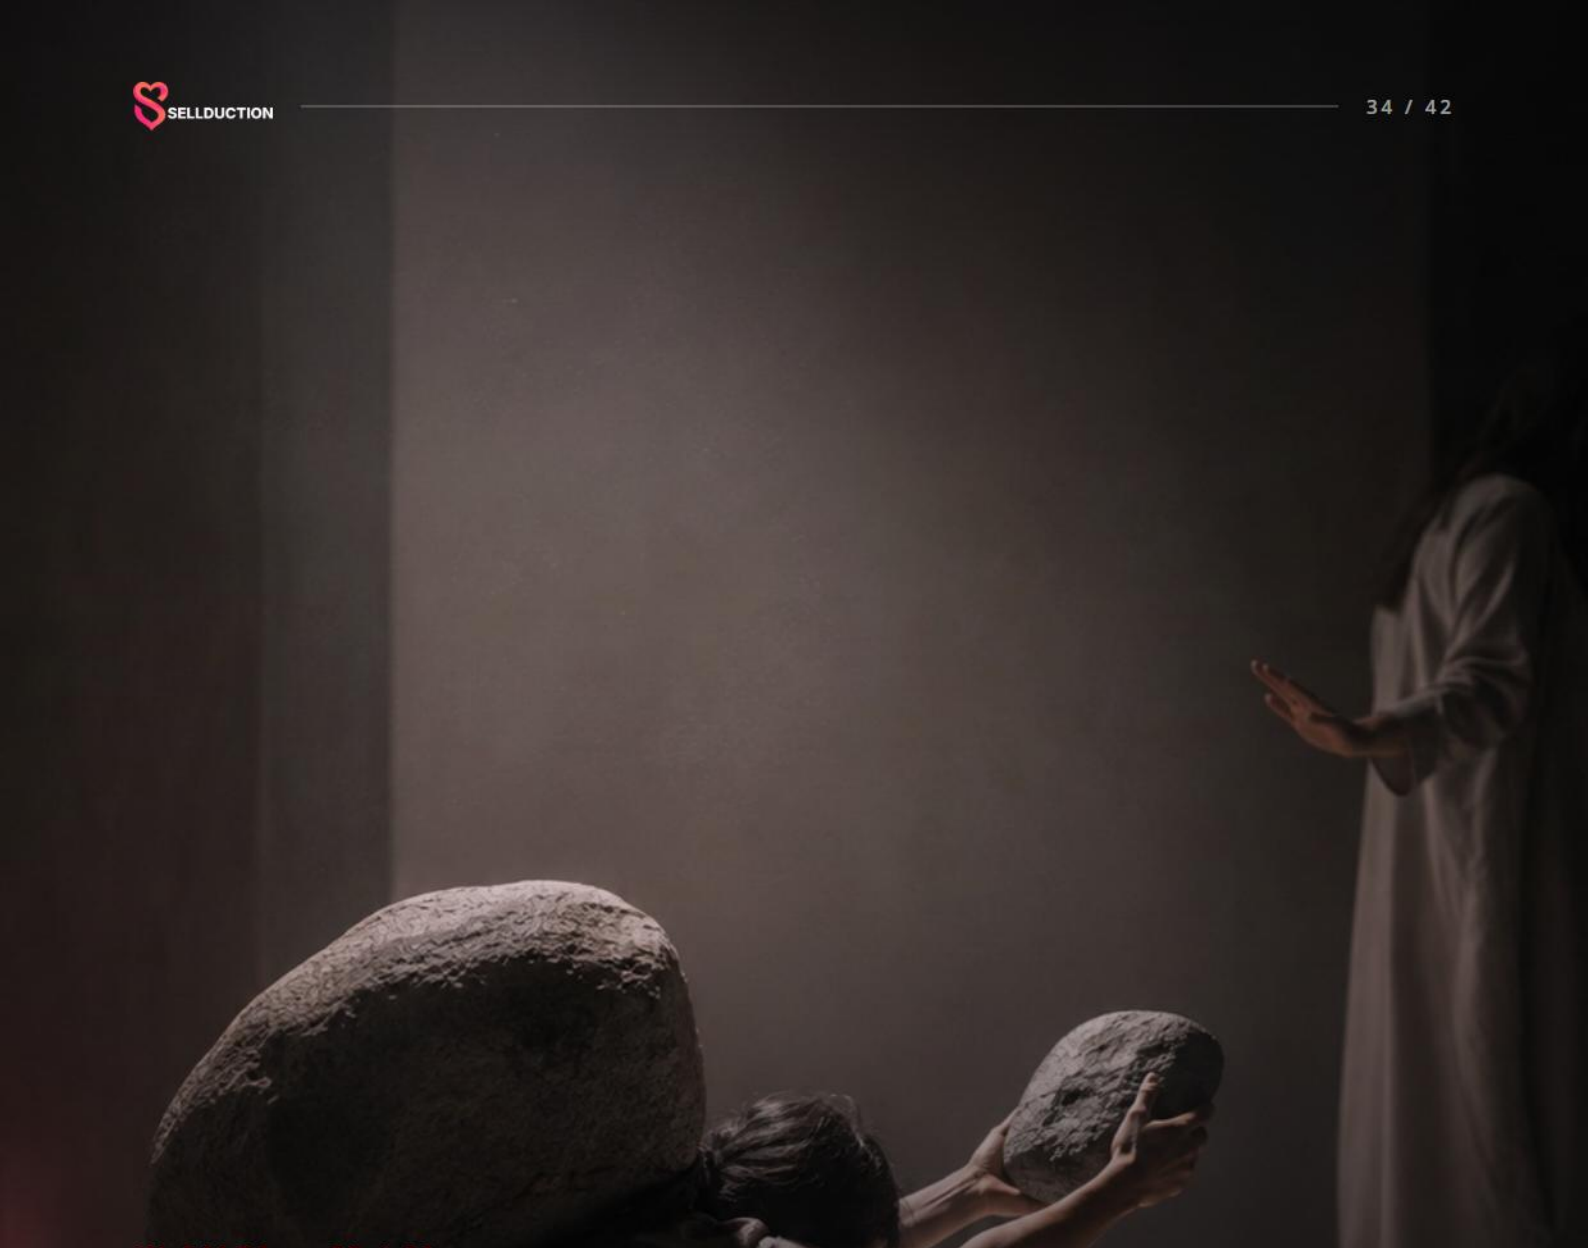

17 PDFs, 3 estimates and 2 projections before he breathes.

- He asked for it with tax, without tax, and one “just to compare”.
- He has a spreadsheet. The spreadsheet has a tab called “scenarios”.
- He is not missing information. He is missing nerve.

WHAT IT COSTS YOU

You deliver paid consulting work, unpaid, to someone who will never decide.

> More data does not produce more courage.

IN SALES · 25 / 30

The Empathetic Martyr

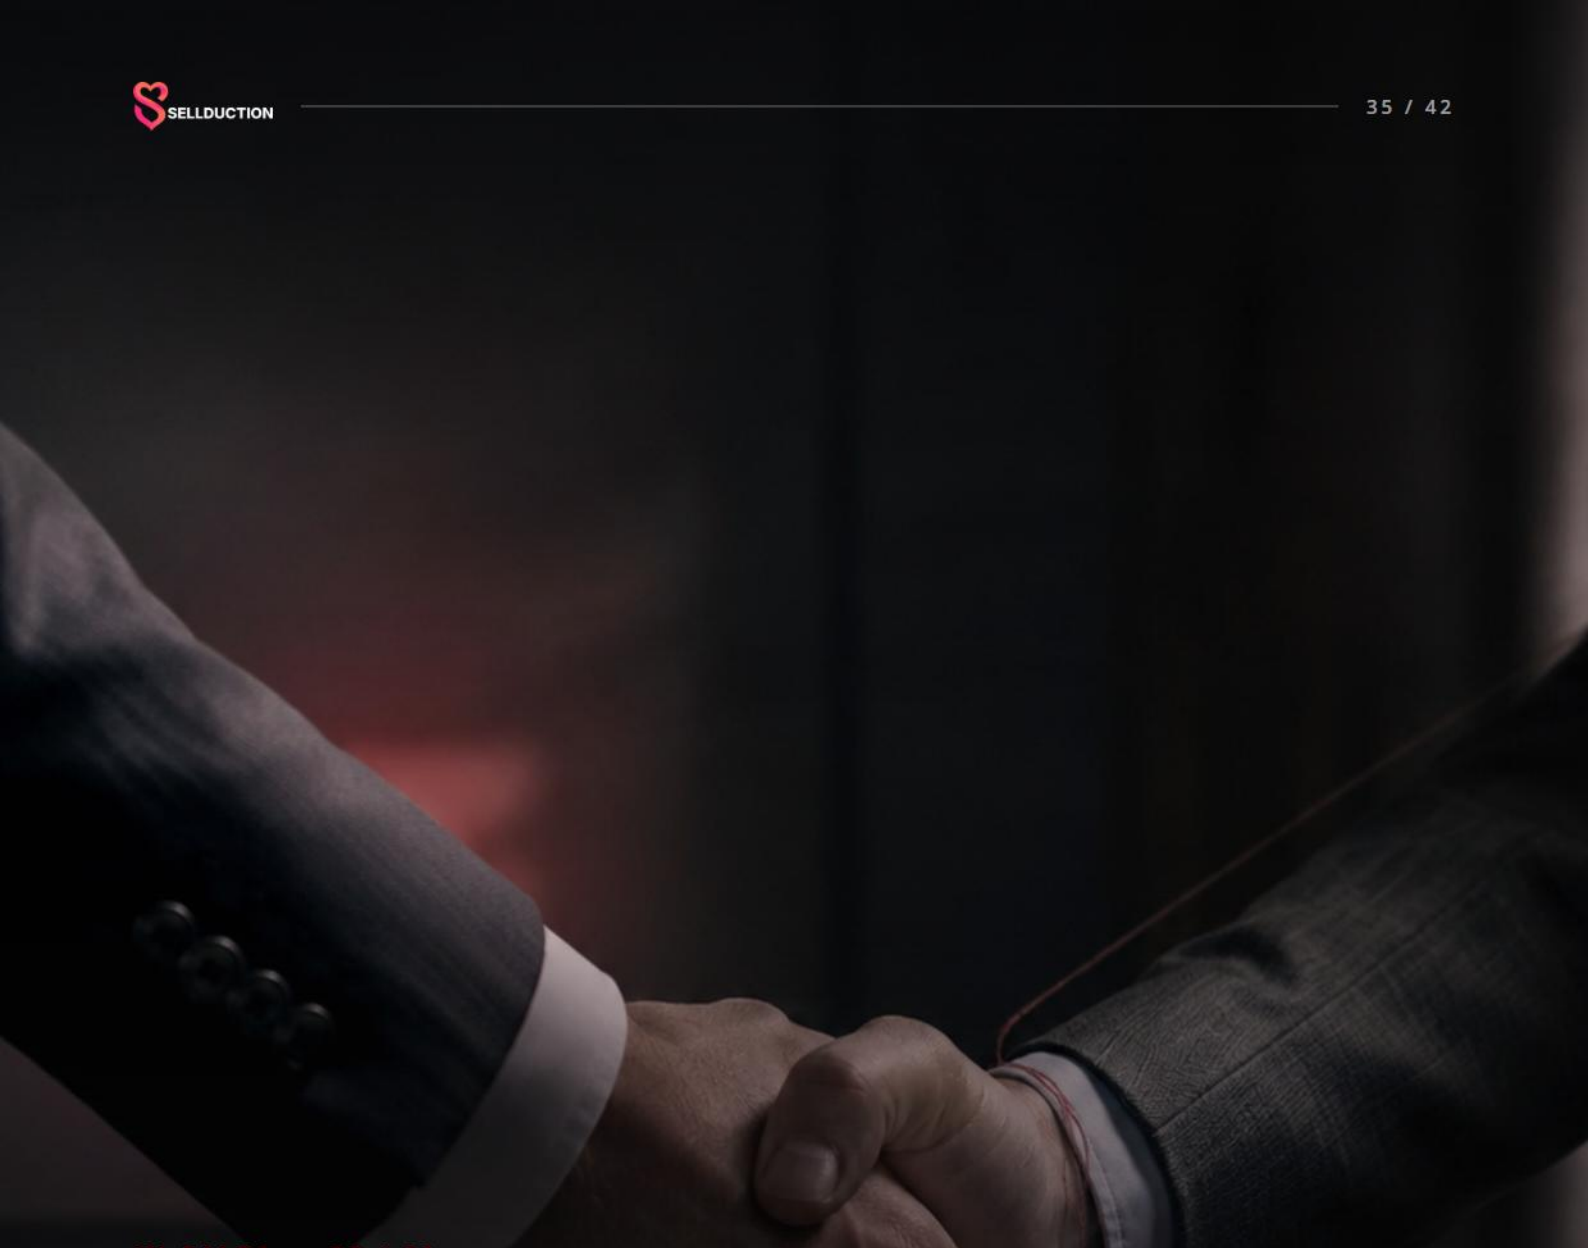

"I don't deserve it." Then asks you for everything, free.

- He tells you how hard things are, right before he asks the price.
- The discount is not a negotiation. It is a morality test, and you are sitting it.
- He thanked you for understanding. He did not sign.

WHAT IT COSTS YOU

You turn your price into an act of charity and yourself into an unpaid therapist.

> Real suffering is not currency.

IN SALES · 26 / 30

The Emotional Blackmailer

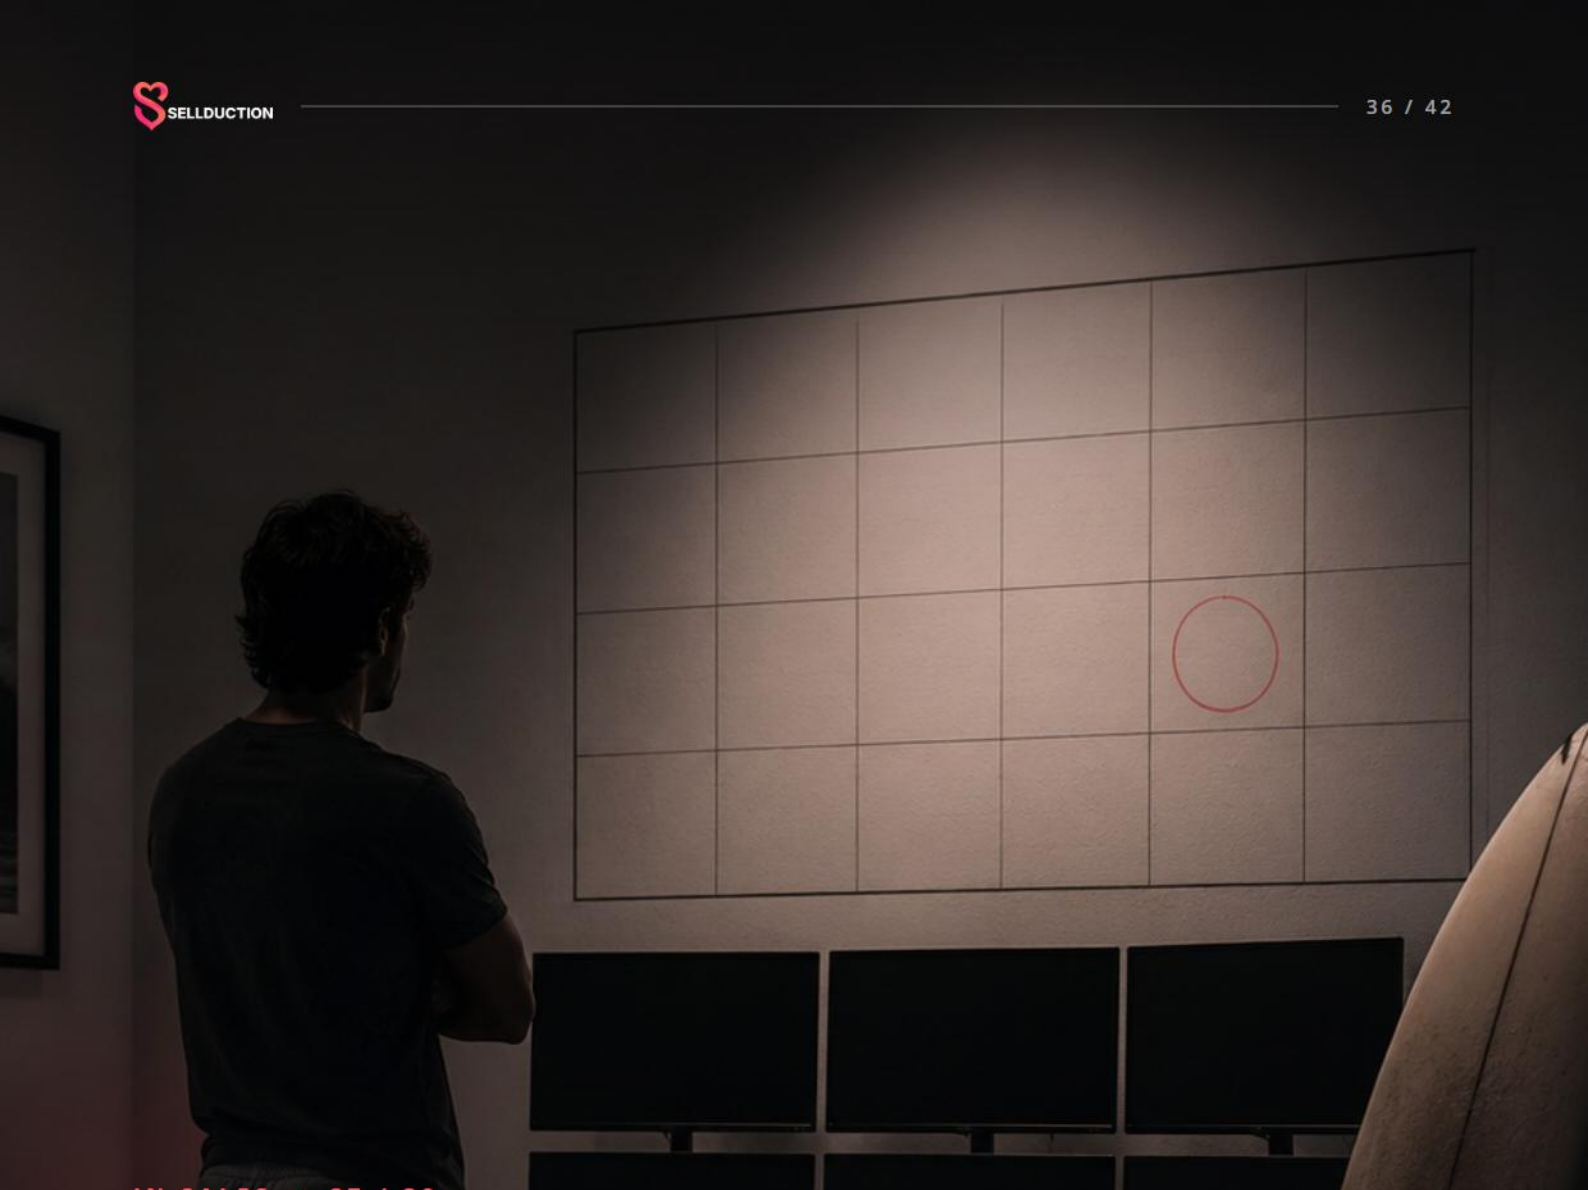

Never asks. Just makes saying no expensive.

- "I thought we were partners." Translation: give me a discount.
- Every no of yours becomes a question about your character.
- You are negotiating with guilt, not with a budget.

WHAT IT COSTS YOU

It becomes a power relationship rather than a partnership. And guess who loses.

> A no that costs you emotionally was never a free no.

IN SALES · 27 / 30

The Weekend Investor

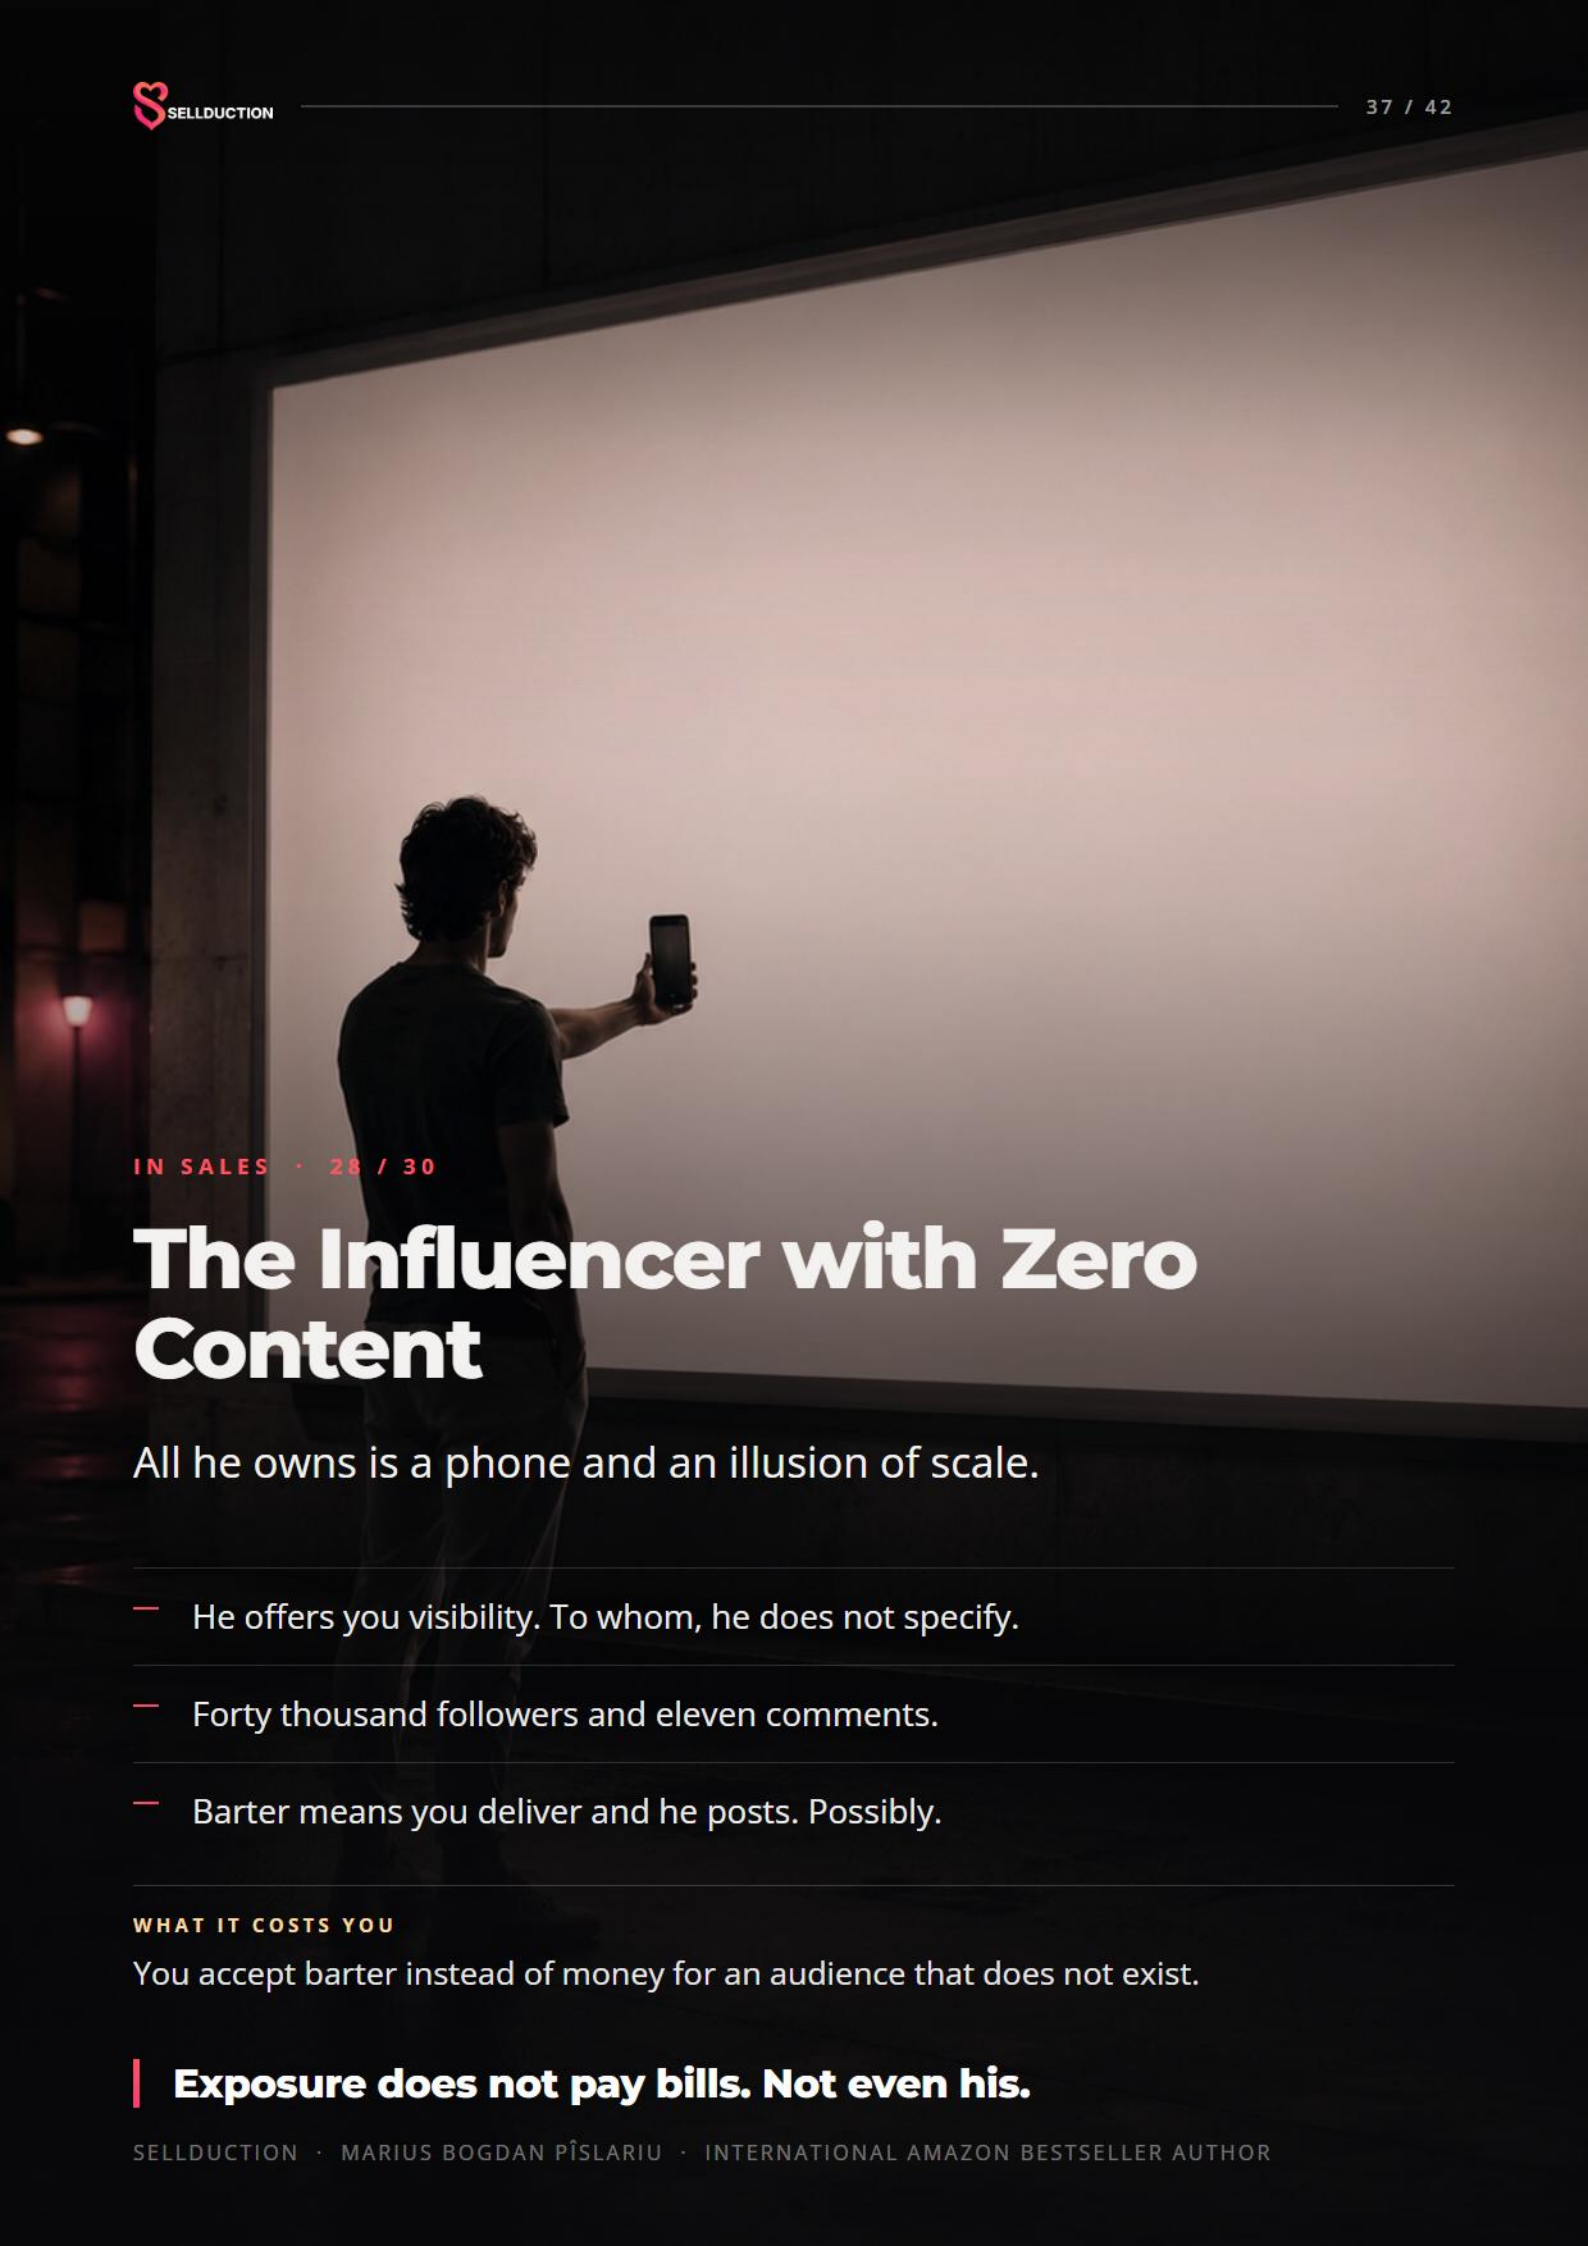

Buys businesses on Saturday. Changes his mind on Sunday.

- On Saturday he wants everything. By Tuesday he has stopped replying.
- He has a favourite podcast. He does not have an accountant.
- “Let's build something big” means “you build it, tell me when it is done”.

WHAT IT COSTS YOU

He flatters you, makes you hope, then vanishes at the first real effort required.

> A fan of everyone. A practitioner of nothing.

IN SALES · 28 / 30

The Influencer with Zero Content

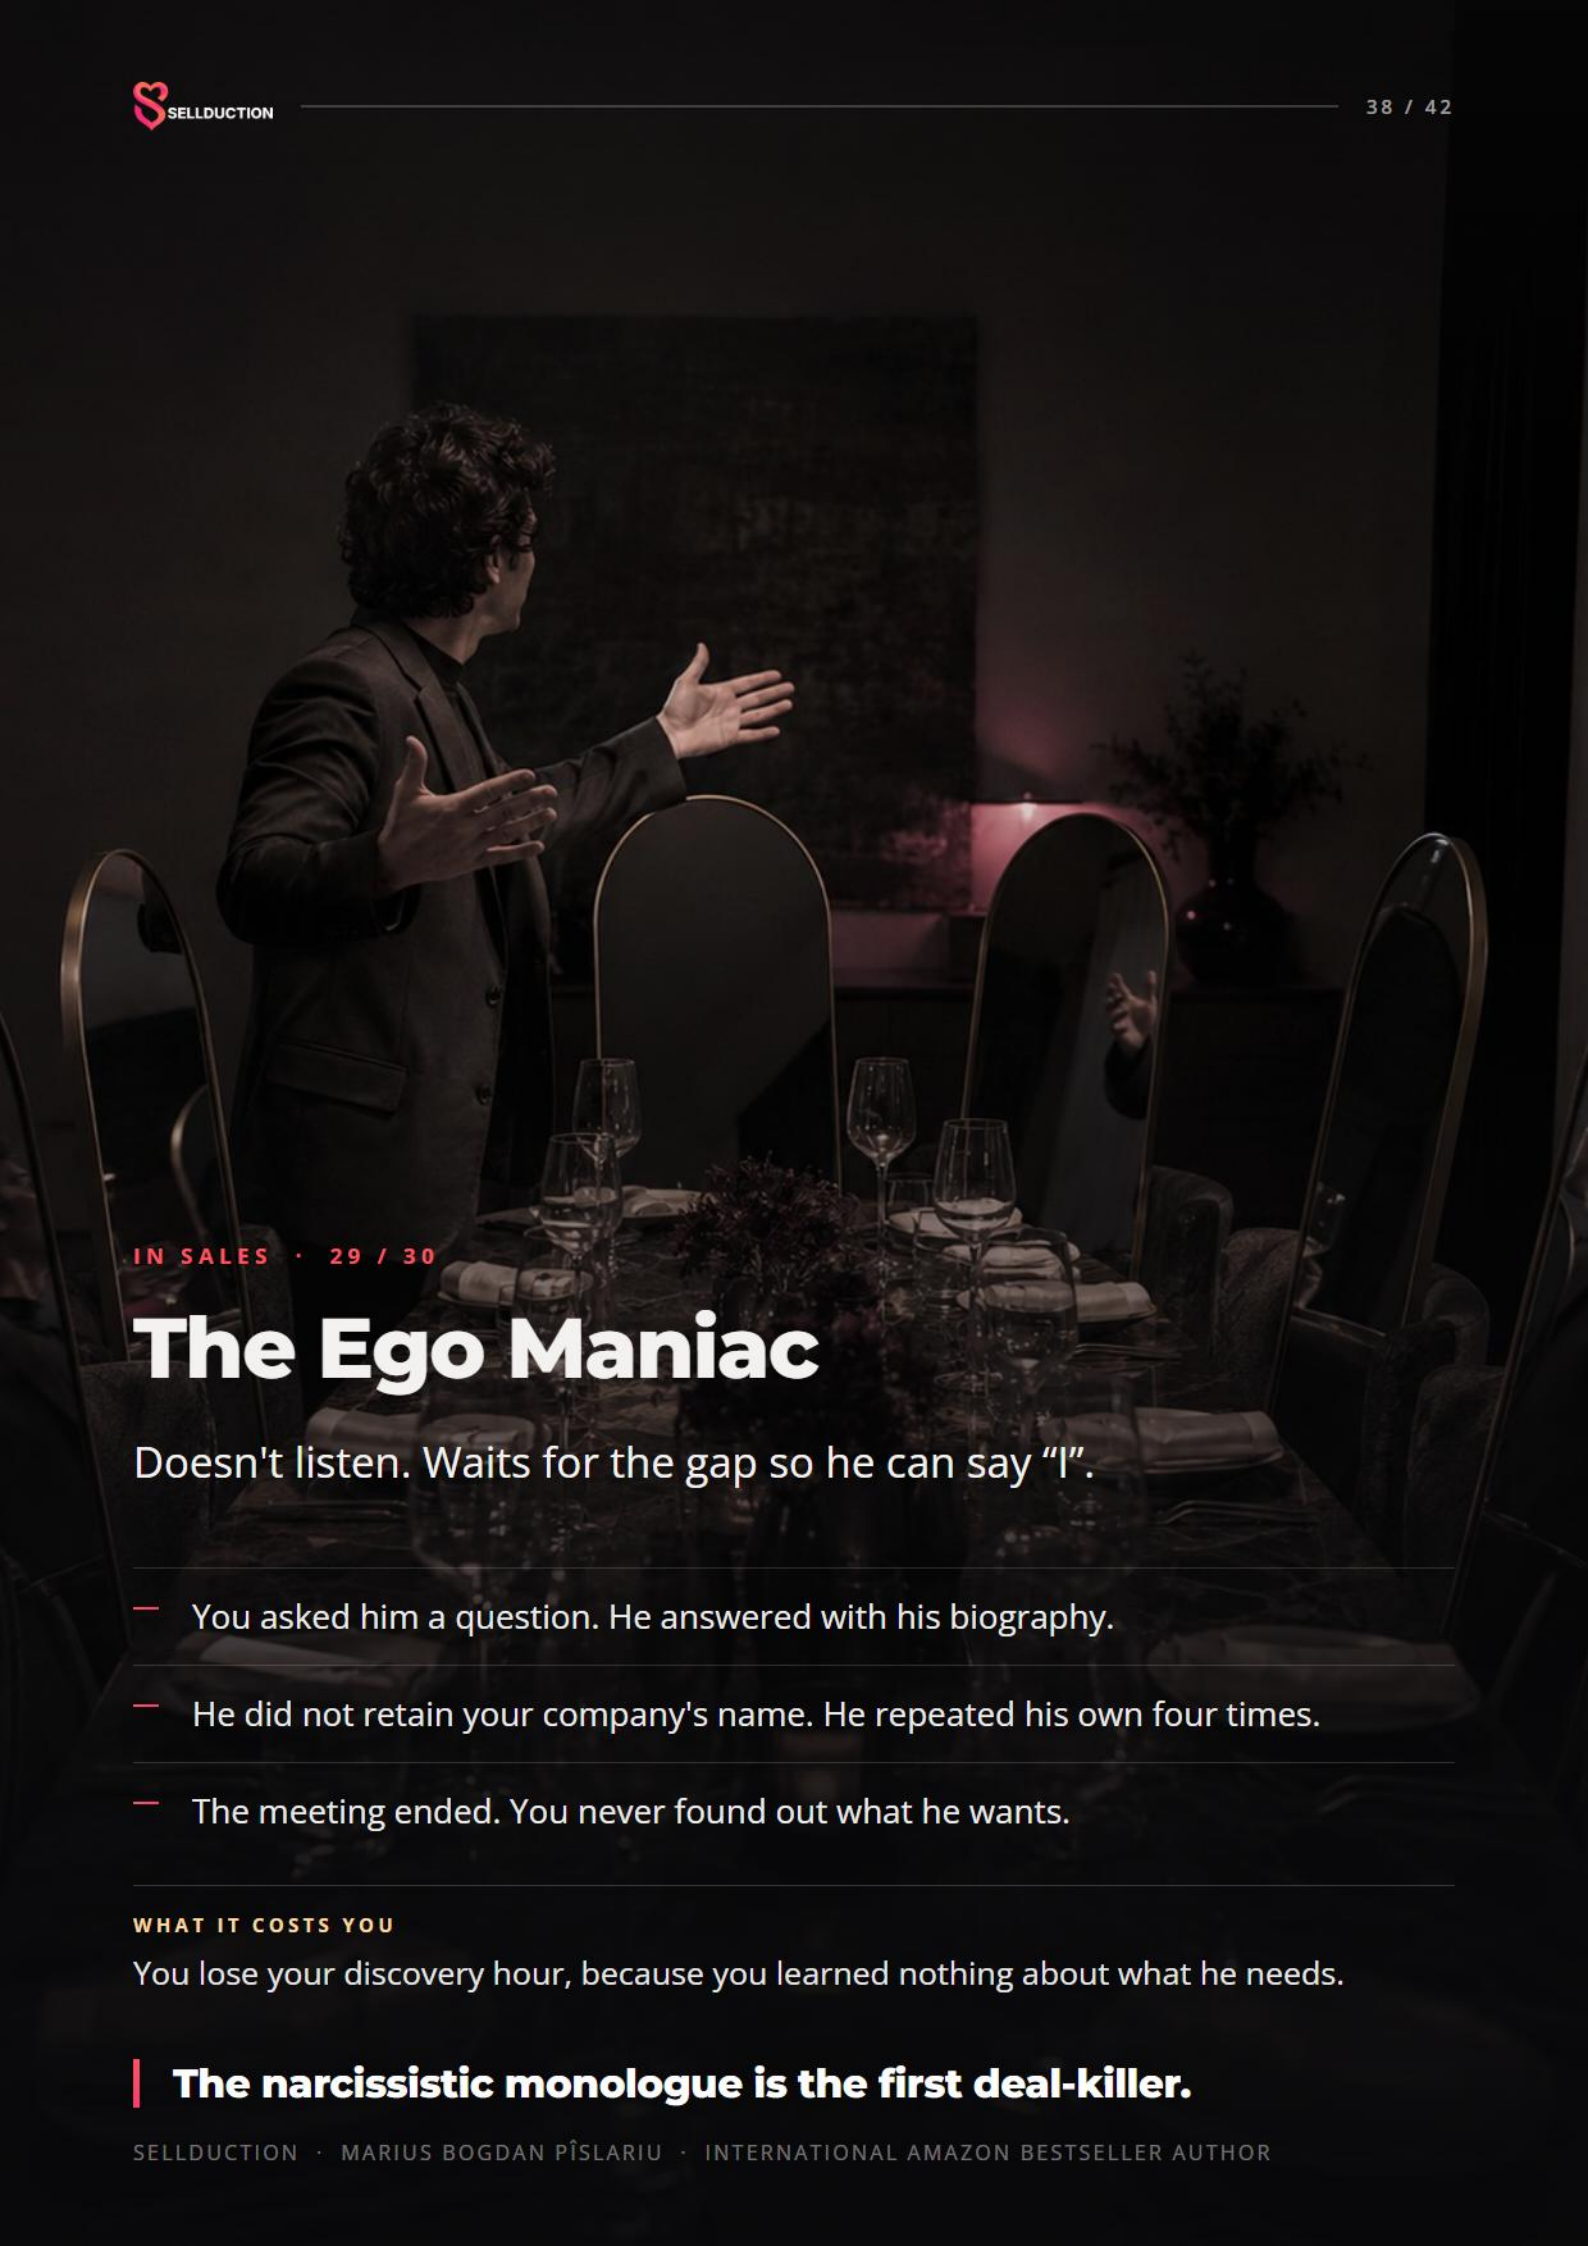

All he owns is a phone and an illusion of scale.

- He offers you visibility. To whom, he does not specify.
- Forty thousand followers and eleven comments.
- Barter means you deliver and he posts. Possibly.

WHAT IT COSTS YOU

You accept barter instead of money for an audience that does not exist.

Exposure does not pay bills. Not even his.

IN SALES · 29 / 30

The Ego Maniac

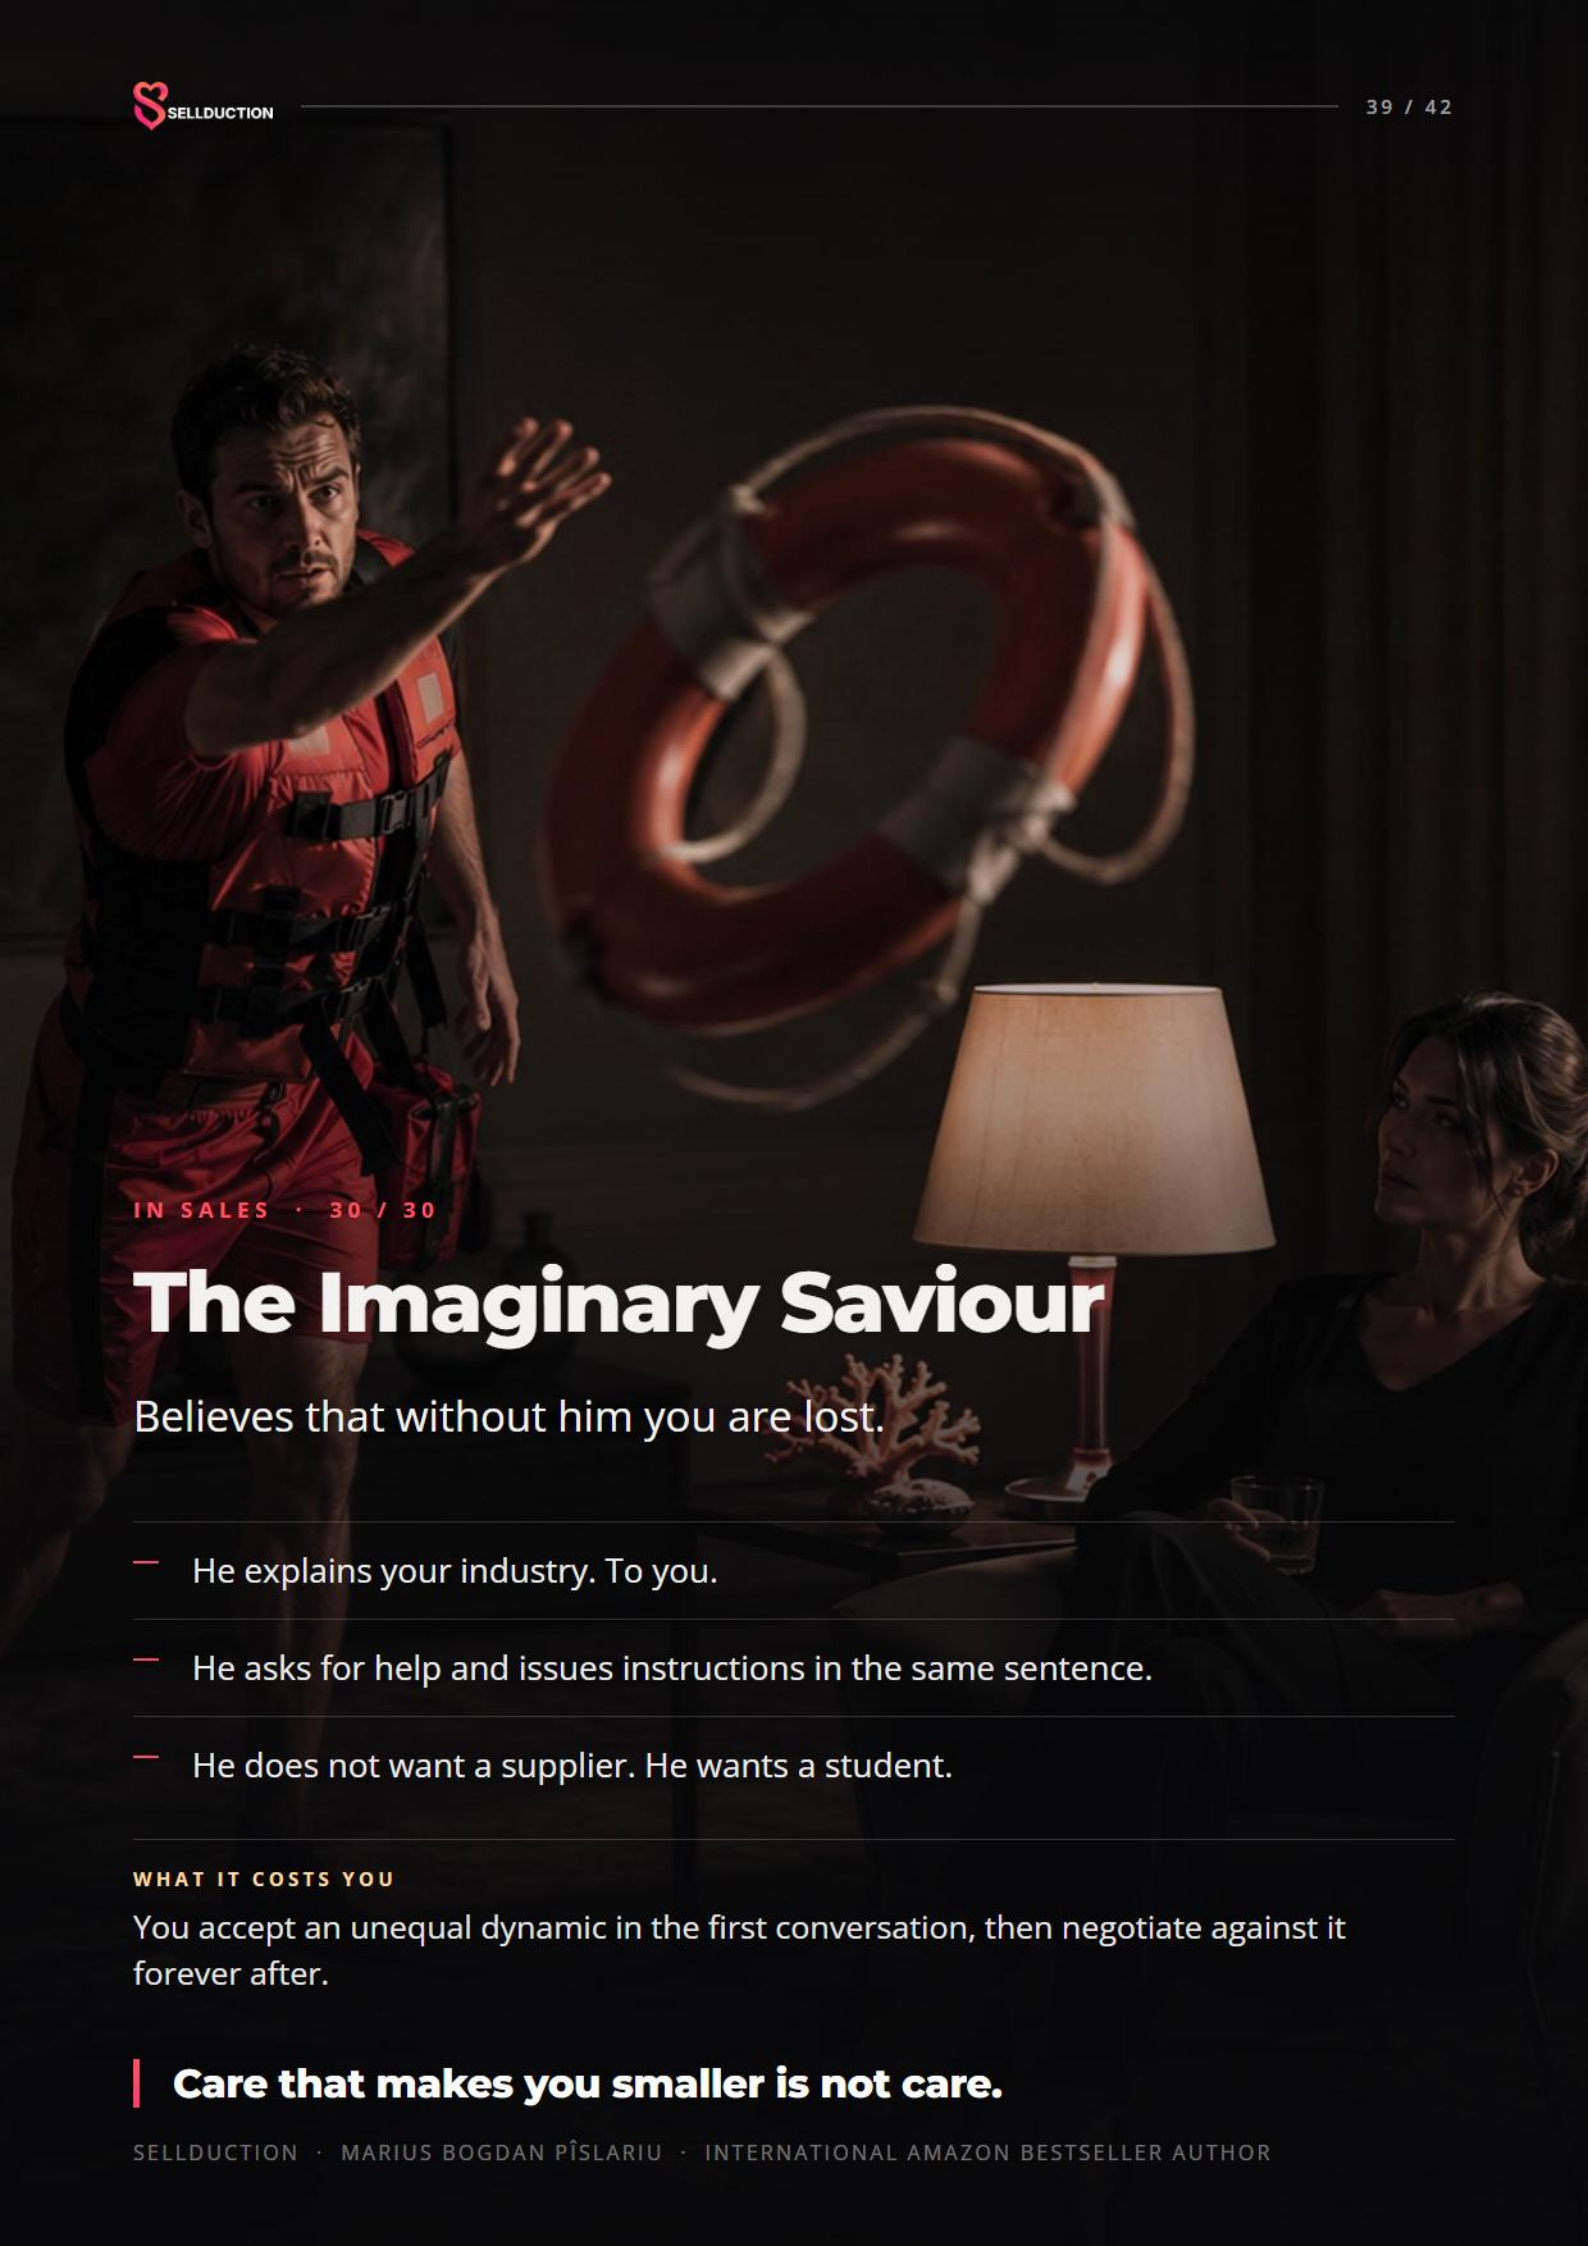

Doesn't listen. Waits for the gap so he can say “I”.

- You asked him a question. He answered with his biography.
- He did not retain your company's name. He repeated his own four times.
- The meeting ended. You never found out what he wants.

WHAT IT COSTS YOU

You lose your discovery hour, because you learned nothing about what he needs.

> The narcissistic monologue is the first deal-killer.

IN SALES · 30 / 30

The Imaginary Saviour

Believes that without him you are lost.

- He explains your industry. To you.
- He asks for help and issues instructions in the same sentence.
- He does not want a supplier. He wants a student.

WHAT IT COSTS YOU

You accept an unequal dynamic in the first conversation, then negotiate against it forever after.

> Care that makes you smaller is not care.

THE TURN

Nobody was ever argued into wanting something.

Which is why this encyclopedia gives you no scripts.

You will not find objection handling here, or a sequence to run on Monday. That layer exists, it is called EdgeEra, and it is a different book. Sellduction is the layer underneath: who you are before the method, and why certain people keep choosing you while others keep wasting you.

The thirty are not the enemy. They are the evidence. A pipeline is a portrait of whoever built it.

FROM THE FOREWORD TO SELLDUCTION

“I can recognize a diamond when I see one.”

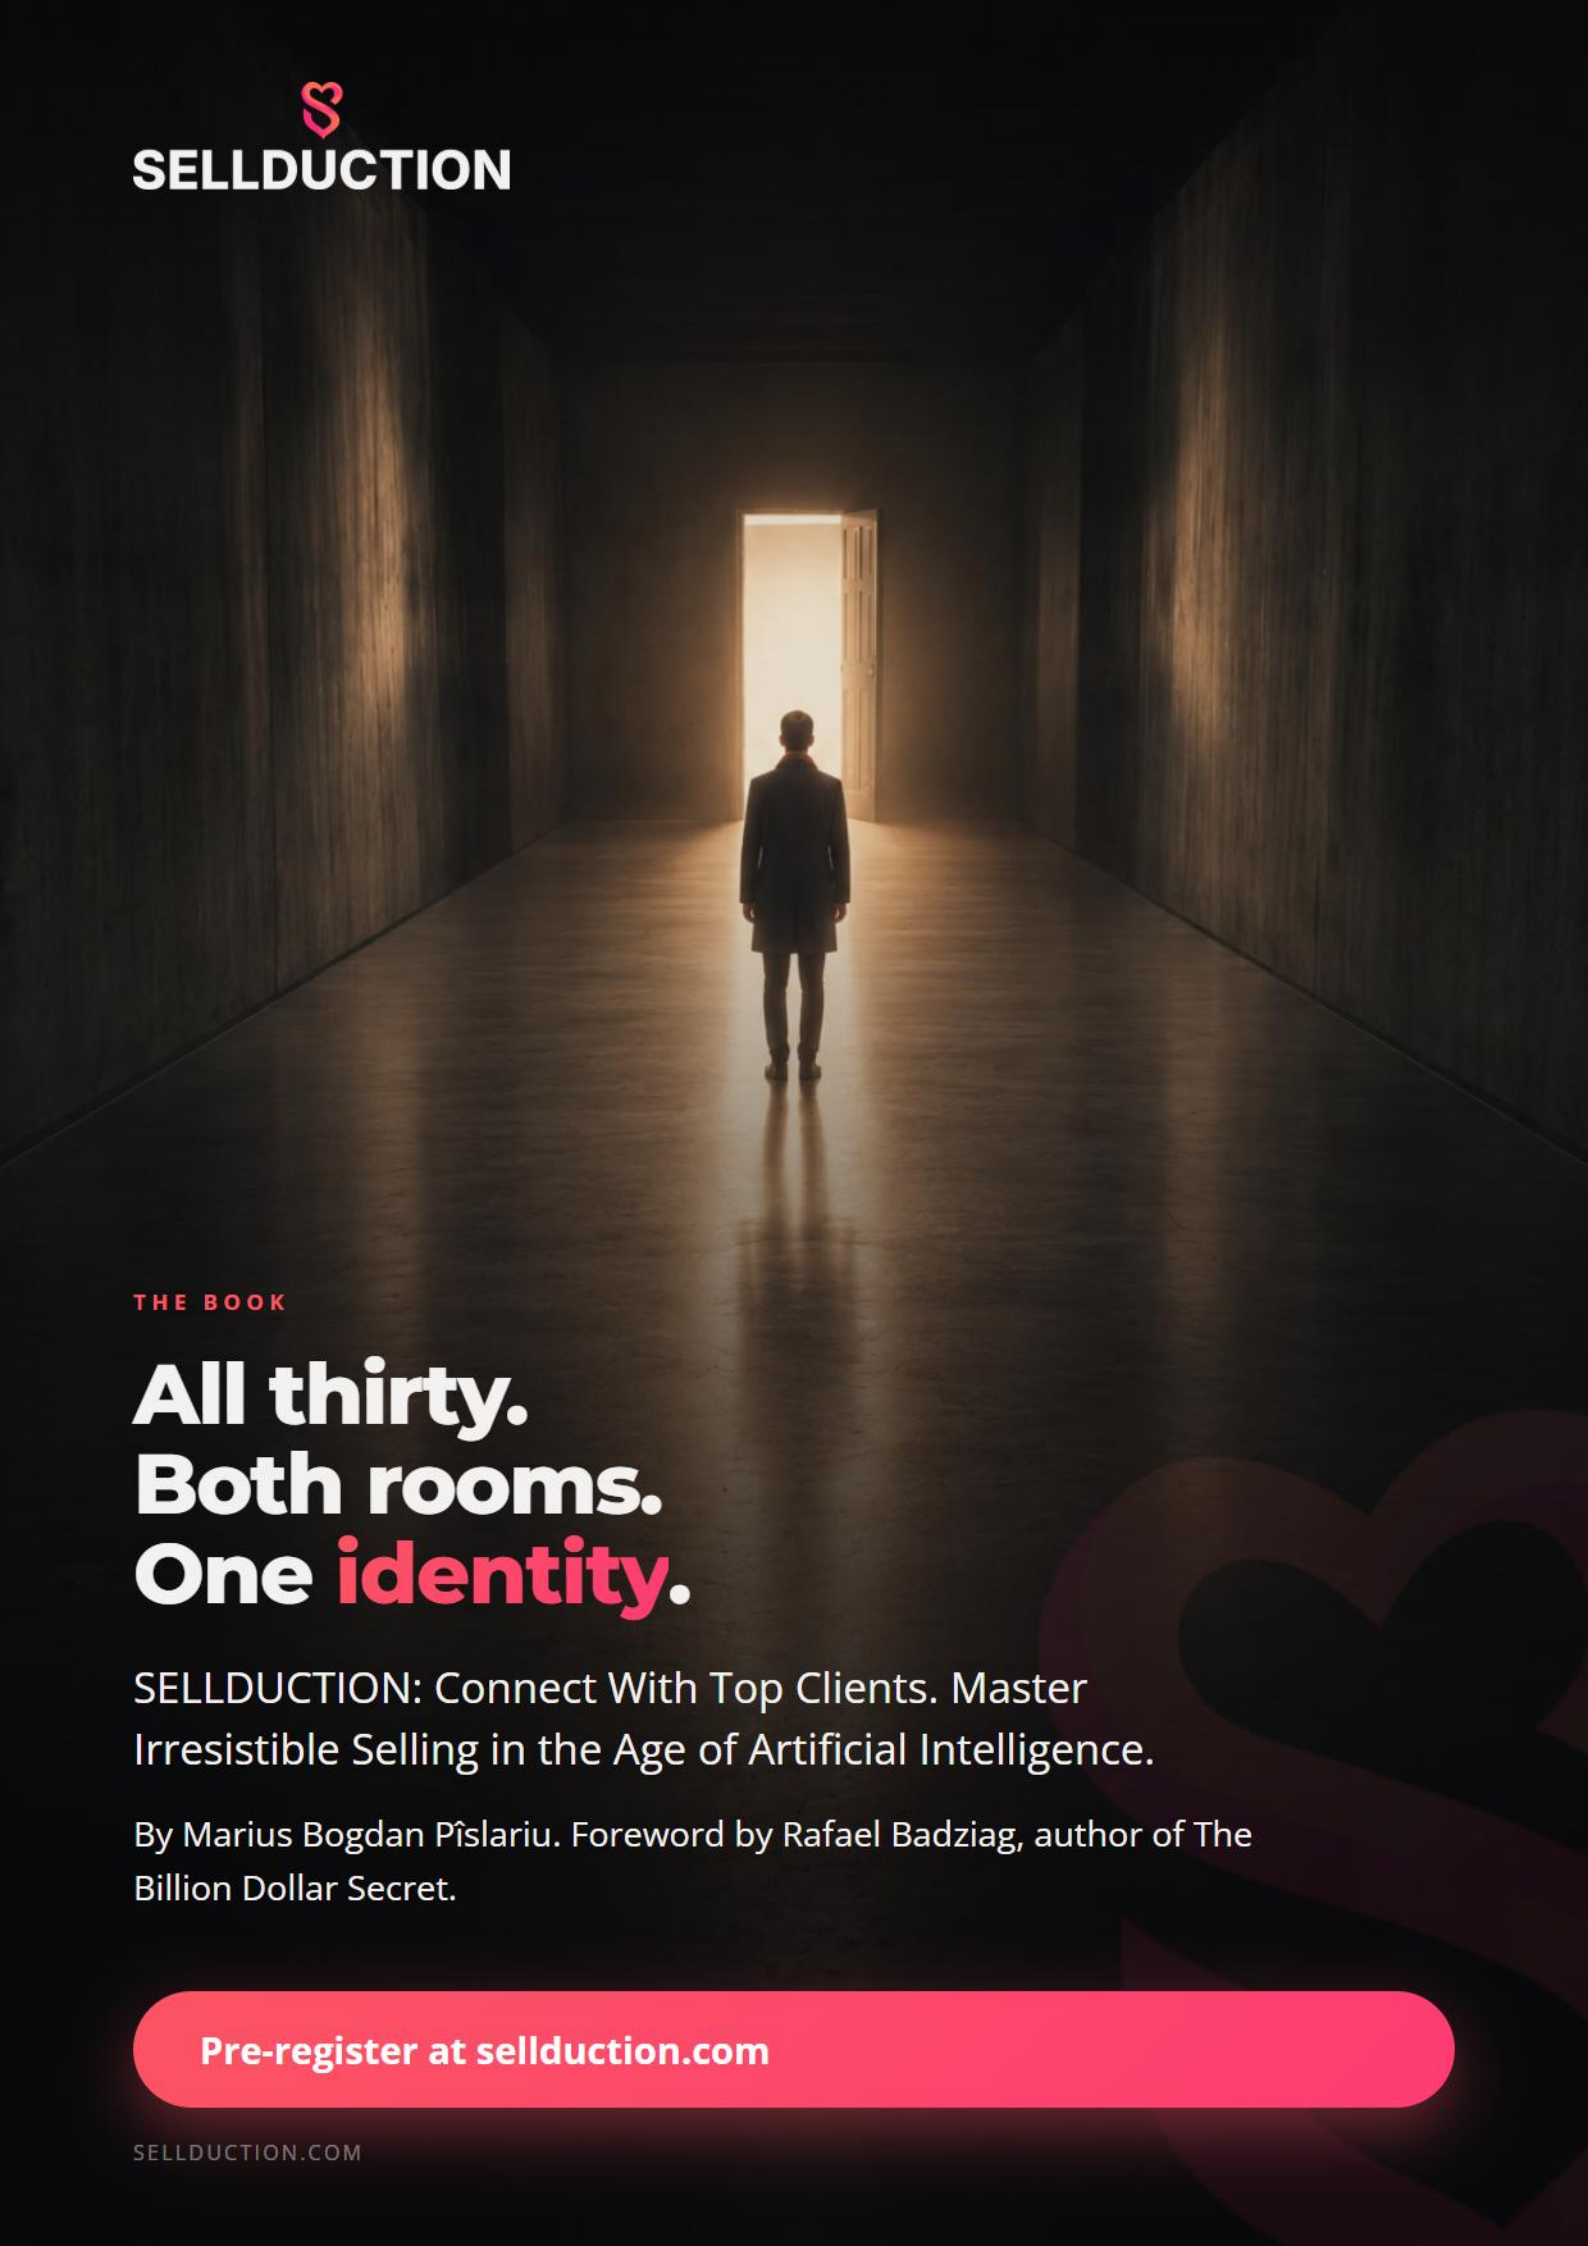

“It was spring 2021. A friend introduced me to a young, jovial and energetic real estate agent named Marius Bogdan. I wasn't entirely sure what I was looking for, so I probably gave him a harder time than most clients. Yet he remained undeterred.”

“He was always punctual, responded promptly and, most importantly, never tried to push a sale. Instead, he focused on genuinely understanding my needs. I had never experienced such a pleasant interaction with any salesperson in any industry.”

“He has a rare gift: the ability to turn clients and prospects into close friends, building authentic and lasting personal connections, whether or not the transaction closes.”

Rafael Badziag
Author of The Billion Dollar Secret

SELLDUCTION

THE BOOK

All thirty. Both rooms. One identity.

SELLDUCTION: Connect With Top Clients. Master Irresistible Selling in the Age of Artificial Intelligence.

By Marius Bogdan Pîslariu. Foreword by Rafael Badziag, author of The Billion Dollar Secret.

Pre-register at sellduction.com

SELLDUCTION.COM